Will Rogers' $5,000.
An Old Engineer.
Our Money in Europe.
Maine Votes Today.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE
(Copyright, 1927.)

FOR Mr. Will Rogers, publicist, actor, cowboy and philosopher, the flying problem is settled. Today, for instance, he starts from Beverly Hills in California by air to New York City and in a day or two he will fly back again.

A few days ago Mr. Rogers offered to bet one of his old friends $5,000 that President Coolidge will run for President in 1928 regardless of his "I do not choose" statement. Mr. Rogers realizes now that his friend could not properly bet and take Mr. Rogers' $5,000 on a certainty, so the bet is off and Rogers is happy.

PERRY THOMAS, one of the oldest, most trustworthy engineers on the New York Central, was soon to retire—as soon as he had saved a little more money. Before the day came a head-on collision ended his life, and as he lay dying in the hospital the old engineer, desiring to free everybody else from blame, told witnesses the accident was his fault. He had run by a block signal in the fog.

THIS reminds the public how much depends on the railroad engineers. They should be better paid than they are now. And they might well be retired on full pay, without waiting until age dims their sight and dulls their nerves. The public would be willing to pay for it.

SENATOR GLASS of Virginia says President Coolidge has no right to control, approve or disapprove American loans abroad by private financial concerns.

But suppose Europe borrows to build up fighting machinery that might be sent against this country, would that make any difference to Senator Glass?

AND suppose bankers encourage Americans to invest money in European bonds drawing usurious rates of interest, that may be repudiated later on, would that make a difference?

THE State of Maine today makes up its mind about retaining the direct primary, or going back to the old plan and letting the bosses select both two sets of candidates, saying to voters "you must take one of these sets and either will suit me, and the big fellows that hire [illegible]

UNDER the boss convention system, intelligent organized finance gets the candidates it wants, for a reasonable price from the bosses. Under the primary system, the big fellows must buy their nominations at great expense, spending millions, as in Pennsylvania and elsewhere recently. The boss convention system is cheaper for the big fellows. Therefore it will probably come back.

Plan 250 Million Tax Cut

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON.
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 18.—The administration's tax reduction program was outlined at the Treasury Department today.

It contemplates a total cut of $250,000,000, about $100,000,000 less than advocated by Senate Republican leaders. Chief features are a 1 per cent cut on the present 13½ per cent corporation tax, a slight reduction of the maximum surtax rates and elimination of practically all of the remaining war taxes.

The plan will be submitted by the Treasury to the House Ways and Means Committee when it meets on October 31 to draft tax legislation.

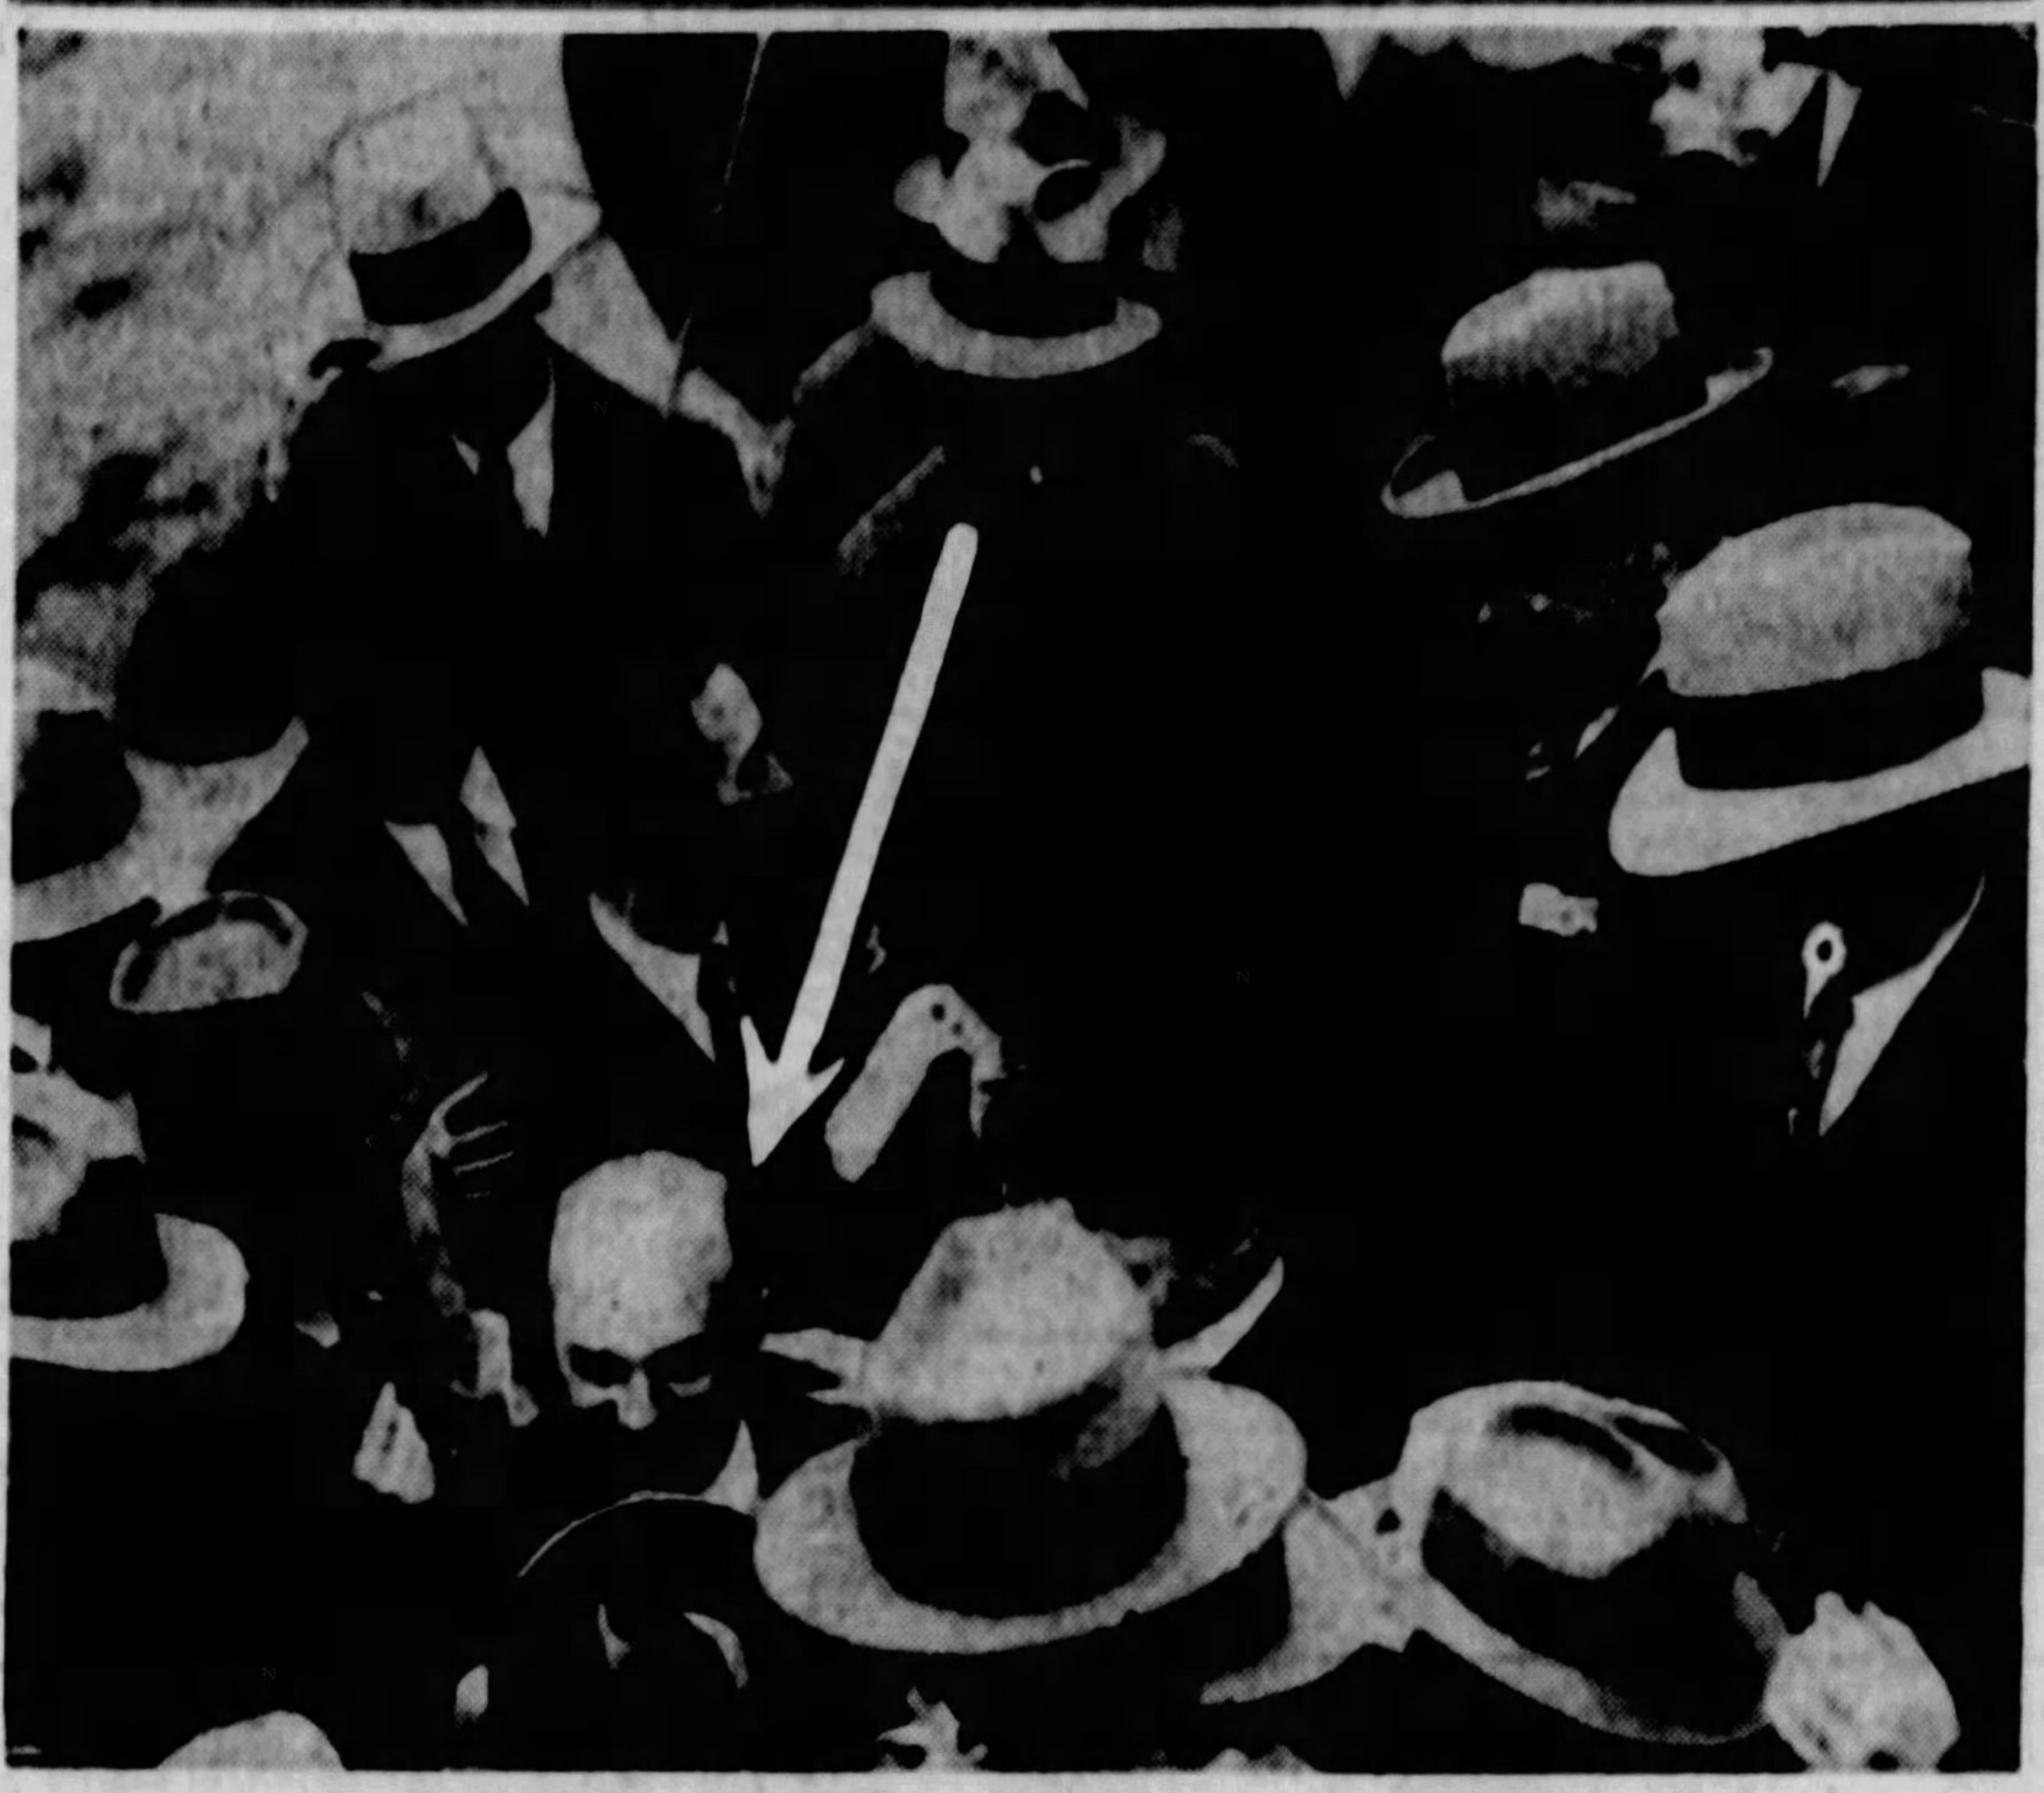
Flees 'Dry' Squad Via Roofs

Crawling over roof tops, William Heimich, 32, of 311 Dinwiddie street, arrested on a prohibition violation charge, escaped from the squad room of prohibition agents in the House Building early today.

Heimich, with Harry Friend, 44, of 1405 Hazel street and Charles Fascocio, 33, of 20 Forty-eighth street, had been arrested at 1622 Colwell street, where Heimich, it is charged, was superintending the removal of a still from Friend's third-floor plant. Fascocio was the truck driver. Two stills, copper and tools were seized.

The three men had been left alone when Heimich escaped. The two others furnished bond.

Levine Greeted on Return



AMONG FRIENDS

Charles A. Levine, first transatlantic air passenger, was wildly greeted on his return to New York City yesterday. Indicated by the arrow, he is shown in the midst of a group of friends on deck the city tug Macom.

"WELCOME, DADDY"

When Charles A. Levine returned to New York City yesterday he was met at the pier by his family and scores of friends. He was snapped by the camera as his little daughter, Eloyse, was kissing him and Mrs. Levine looked on.

2 Women, 10 Men on Oil Jury

By GEORGE E. DURNO,
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 18.—Two attractive young women and ten men of mature age will determine the fate of Former Secretary of Interior Albert B. Fall and Harry F. Sinclair, millionaire oil magnate, on trial here for criminal conspiracy to defraud the government of naval oil reserves.

After a day and a half of intensive examination of veniremen, 40 of whom were questioned, government and defense announced satisfaction and Owen J. Roberts, of federal counsel, launched into his opening address in which he outlined the nature of the government's case.

REVIEWS CASE

Roberts went into the functioning of the defunct Continental Trading Company of Canada, out of which came the money the government contends was used to bribe Fall. He told how Sinclair and his associates formed the Continental solely to buy 33,000,000 barrels of oil at $1.50 per barrel, which oil was promptly sold to Sinclair companies at $1.75.

The profits, asserted Roberts, were turned into Liberty Bonds, of which $230,500 worth, serially numbered, were turned over to M. T. Everhart, Fall's son-in-law. The latter deposited them to Fall's credit in New Mexico and Colorado banks.

Roberts rested and the court took a noon recess. First, however, Justice Siddons charged the jury to avoid discussions of the case with outsiders and "to keep your minds open."

THE WEATHER

Cloudy weather preceded by light rains this afternoon and tonight; Wednesday fair.

BRIBE IN ROLLING PIN MURDER AIRED

The Mumford rolling-pin murder case was drawn for a jury in Criminal Court today in a dramatic word picture by the only eye-witness, Mrs. Ruth Kelly, of West Stockton street, North Side, who was arrested last night in a North Side cabaret by city detectives to insure her attendance at the trial. Mrs. Kelly, they reported, told a story of an attempt by another woman to bribe her to disappear or change her story.

This afternoon Assistant District Attorney Roy Clunk, after strenuous but unsuccessful objection by the defense, read to the jury a statement by the defendant, Mrs. Roxie B. Mumford, given to detectives and signed by her, according to witnesses, relating the story of the killing.

She struck her husband, Joseph B. Mumford, on the head with a rolling pin in the second-floor bedroom of their home, 1510 Metropolitan street, North Side, the statement read, early in the evening of Easter Sunday, in a fit of anger when she came upon him and Mrs. Kelly in the bedroom.

Mrs. Kelly, a brunette of 27, testified that Mrs. Mumford had met her in the park that afternoon, and that they had gone to the Mumford home, where the husband provided drinks and soon all were intoxicated. Mumford sent them upstairs to sober up and soon joined them, offering more drinks, according to Mrs. Kelly.

Mrs. Mumford refused to drink, her husband insisted, according to the witness, and Mrs. Mumford went downstairs to the kitchen, reappearing with a rolling pin. "Without a word she struck him as his back was partly turned to her, and he fell to the floor," Mrs. Kelly testified. "I

Does It Pay? This Girl Thought So—

Margie Marsh, attractive, with a background of luxury and culture, started to carve her own career in New York. She was an orphan, beautiful in a distinctive way, and ambitious.

In New York, with four other girls, she engineered a co-operative apartment scheme by which they all lived economically but comfortably. She had a lot of courage and hope for the future—but the dull routine of her single life was too much. She decided to marry.

Would it be rich man, poor man, begger man, thief? She didn't get beyond the first and decided that her husband must be wealthy above all things.

How many girls in America deciding on snaring a man with money face the futility of circumstances? Many do; but Margie Marsh had a French education, and was good-looking, too. She found a way to break into Newport society. The royalty of America played there. She played there—but her game was more dangerous. And if tears were pearls—?

She had adventures with rich, fawning men—rich, selfish men—rich, corrupt men—rich, good men. Their yachts, their parties, their secrets, their affections became hers.

Thus begins the outline of "IT NEVER PAYS"—a thrilling, gripping

VOTE FRAUD CASE OPENS

Cheats Hit By State

Election frauds at the spring primary May 18, 1926, that deprived a candidate for the Legislature of the nomination, with the ballots and other election records emptied into a sewer from the ballot box, were charged against the election board of the Sixteenth district of the Twenty-second ward by First Assistant District Attorney Andrew T. Park, in an outline of the commonwealth's case before a jury today in Criminal Court in opening the long-delayed prosecution.

One member of the board, Patrick J. Downey, a defendant on the charge of conspiracy, will testify for the prosecution and tell of the cheating, Park declared. The judge of election, Alvin Miller, disappeared after the primary and has never been apprehended. Charles Carr, a clerk of the board, is a fictitious person, registered from a vacant lot, and never appeared for duty, Park charged. The two remaining members of the board, J. William Bolster and Mrs. Anna Conklin, were placed on trial, Bolster with a record of having been convicted last week of false pretense in collecting $10 from the county for pay for Carr.

FIRE CAPTAIN ON TRIAL

Fire Capt. Charles Golden also went on trial as a co-defendant in the charge of conspiracy, and Park

HORTA, The Azores Islands, Oct. 18.—The first 11 hours and 45 minutes of flying being over and knowing that one-third of our flight was behind, we settled ourselves down. Then we addressed ourselves to the business of following our true course for the next 12 hours of daylight.

We began taking advantage of the wind currents and making accurate checks on our drift in order that we might hold a true course.

The sky was still considerably overcast and the sun was completely hidden from our view at times for an hour or more. This prevented us from being satisfied with the checks that we were attempting to make of our drift as we passed over the white caps, which were plainly seen as we were flying reasonably low.

But as the sun would peep through the clouds we would check up on the drift of the plane, and at 8:30 on Wednesday morning (our first morning out from New York) we were able to deter-

SNOW GRIPS HIGHWAYS, TRAINS

CONNELLSVILLE, Pa., Oct. 18.—Traffic on the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad was delayed last night by a heavy snowstorm. The Capitol Limited was delayed 15 minutes, and later trains were more than an hour behind schedule.

WIRES GO DOWN

A strong wind accompanied the snow and heavily laden wires went down. Trees were blown across the tracks and it was necessary to summon emergency force to keep trains moving. The snowbound area was between Confluence and Hyndman on the Connellsville division.

Farmers from Springfield township reported two inches of snow.

FOUR INCHES DEEP

BROWNSVILLE, Pa., Oct. 18.—(AP.)—Tourists reaching Brownsville from the East today said nearly four inches of snow fell in the mountains along the National highway east of here. On Woodcock Hill, just west of Somerfield, the snow reached a depth of four inches. Snow was still

5,000 SEEK INCREASE IN PAY

DENVER, Col., Oct. 18.—(AP.)—Work was at a standstill in the northern Colorado lignite coal fields today as between 2,000 and 5,000 miners answered an I. W. W. strike call.

At Trinidad in the Southern Colorado field a check of seven Colorado Fuel and Iron Company mines showed less than 2 per cent of the miners failed to come to work today. In the Aguilar and Walsenburg fields early estimates placed the number of strikers at half the men.

Six members of the I. W. W. were arrested for picketing near Aguilar this morning, but no trouble has been reported in any of the coal fields.

The strike was called by the I. W. W. in an attempt to get the mine owners to grant a set scale of $8.50 a day for day men, diggers and loaders. Coal companies of Colorado recently granted company men an increase of 68 cents a day and diggers an increase of 4 cents a ton.

ran to telephone the police and when I returned Mrs. Mumford said, 'I killed him.'"

Mrs. Kelly said she had never met Mumford before that day. "Didn't you meet him several years before at the 'Bucket of Blood' on Main street, North Side?" asked Attorney J. Howard Devlin, defense counsel. The witness said she did not think so.

Attorney Devlin, attempting to bring out her arrest last night in conection with the reputed bribery, asked, "Were you not arrested last night?" and later, "To whom did you talk about your story before you took the stand?" but this questioning was ruled out.

An unusual angle was given to the case yesterday when a Mrs. Ethel Mumford appeared in the courtroom under the belief that she had been married to the slain man. As Mrs. Ethel Rheims, a widow with four children, she married Joseph B. Mumford in Logansport, Ind., in October, 1926, and lived with him until January, when he deserted her, she said. Her description of him, a man six feet tall and weighing more than 200 pounds, a carpenter, tallied with the police records of the slain man.

Girl of Six Victim of Attack

The victim of a brutal attack on her sixth birthday, an East McKeesport girl is in a serious condition in her home. Joseph Hinton, a truck driver, is being held in county jail in connection with the case.

The girl was enticed into a truck and then attacked and thrown into Penn avenue, East McKeesport. Wilmerding police were told by persons who saw the truck drive away after the girl had been thrown out.

Hinton's arrest followed. He denied any knowledge of the outrage when committed to jail to await a hearing in East McKeesport Police Court Friday night.

except for attacking the Soviet government.

The working day is reduced to seven hours.

WHAT a surprise to childish Wall Street financiers who bought Kerensky bonds, when a child might have known better, if Russia should work out a government, made the safest in the world by doing the most good for the greatest possible number of those governed.

The thing is not impossible. There is no other nation that takes seriously the rights and needs of the masses, except when forced to do so by strikes or other violence, disturbing to the "better classes."

We do fairly well in America by enabling the little man to have his automobile, radio, and savings bank account. But we DO NOT TAKE HIM SERIOUSLY.

DR. BARNES, British bishop of Birmingham, entering the pulpit of St. Paul's Cathedral in London, was denounced by a fellow clergyman as a "false heretical teacher." Bishop Barnes accepts the plain truths of geology written in the rocks. God certainly wrote that story in the rocks, according to the bishop, whatever may be said about other writings.

THE Bishop even accepts the theory of evolution, with 95 per cent of other educated men in the world. Inge, dean of St. Paul's, even says that the attacks of inspiration to which St. Paul was subject, were really epileptic attacks.

Those gentlemen would have been burned alive a few years ago, but that method of curing heresy has been abandoned for the present.

Ruth in Panic as Oil Leaks mine that we were still fighting a northeast wind.

We studied carefully and calculated our drift from the north as being approximately 12 degrees. Knowing that our speed had been cut down considerably by the headwind, we determined our position at 8:30 a. m. as being 38 degrees north, 40 degrees west.

Figuring that to be true and knowing that our gas consumption had been reasonably high for the first 15 hours, we knew we would have to do everything possible in order to save gasoline. If we made any miscalculation our gas might begin to run low just when we needed it and we might be in danger.

Therefore, we saw we had to take advantage of the winds for the next 12 hours to be prepared for the 700 to 800 miles of head winds which we knew we would encounter when evening would overtake us at 9:30, Wednesday.

Everything had been lovely up to this point, but we began to be concerned over the heavy use of gas.

LEAKS DISCOVERED

Then, suddenly, I noticed something that gave me my first concern. Oil began to show on the plane where there should not have been any and I wondered what might be wrong.

I called George Haldeman's attention to an exceptional amount of oil on the right hand wing struts and also underneath the wing on my side. He showed very little concern at this, but began to look things over very carefully.

It was quite clear to both of us that we had some unexpected thing to contend with, but George was as nonchalant as if he were sitting in a hotel lobby and as if the great Atlantic were not under our feet! Nevertheless there was something about his manner that betrayed his anxiety and I became quite conscious of the fact that he was trying to behave so I could not be concerned. So I acted just as indifferently about that oily trouble telltale as he did.

BEGINS TO WORRY

Finally it became evident that those oil splashes just had to be investigated, so George said he would like me to take the controls for a while so he could make a real examination.

George moved carefully back on to the gas tank to make room for me and I shifted over to his position at the controls and when I once got them in hand that left him entirely free. Then he moved around back of me and got over into the position I had had on the right hand side of the plane.

He began to give everything in sight a thorough size-up. I was really beginning to worry about this time. I mean I worried about the success of the flight and not about any possible danger, because we are never willing to admit to ourselves that there is any danger.

"George, do you think there can be anything the matter with the oil, or oil supply?" I asked.

He replied to the effect that due to the fact that we had to run the motor at near top speed for so many hours in order to maintain our altitude that the motor was throwing off, through the exhaust, an exceptional amount of oil.

I looked intently at his face and concluded that he was not telling all he thought.

I shifted back over the tank while George reached leftward and took the controls, and I got around back of him into my original position on the right side.

I had first seen the oil on the right side of the plane, but while I was at the controls, I noticed some on the left side, also, for the first time. As soon as George got settled at the controls on the left side I saw that he had for the first time noticed oil splashes on the left-hand strut and on the underneath side of the wing and the left side of the fuslage.

REACH TURNING POINT

It was evident, in spite of his reassurance, that he was feeling some concern over the oily evidences of something being wrong. I asked him again about the excess amount of oil, but he assured me it was old oil which had been thrown off earlier in the flight, either by running the motor at too high a' speed, or by not allowing sufficient room in the oil tank for expansion before we left Roosevelt Field.

I felt relieved for the moment and hoped it was that. But we began talking of the oil again and when we discussed how carefully Mr. Porter, our faithful engineer, had checked the oil and all gas tanks before our departure, we were sure that could not be so.

However, we decided we must be all right after Porter's calculation. Then we made another check on our drift and presuming ourselves to be at approximately the turning point on the steamship lane, we changed our course to 99 degrees magnetic. We had both been under a mental strain for a while, but now felt relaxed once more.

Nevertheless, we both began to wonder when we might sight some steamers. Referring to our charts of steamers we believed that within the next three hours we would sight two or three west-bound steamers, as we had their positions before leaving.

We flew for some six hours without sighting a vessel, and, because we still had a head wind out of the northeast, we presumed we were still to the right of the steamship lane.

THAT OIL AGAIN

We did not believe this to be any great disadvantage, as we thought that we would possibly have to take a more southerly route to the edge of the storm area which had its center at 45 degrees north, 25 degrees west. Then the sun went down and for two hours before sunset we had been climbing the ship very steadily and had reached an altitude of approximately 5,000 feet.

We both tried to be as cheerful as possible, and talked about everything but oil. But some force drew my eyes to the oil splashes every once in a while and I could see they were getting heavier. Also I could see that George saw they were getting heavier. All the cheerfulness was bluff on both sides.

Up to this time neither of us had eaten anything, nor had we wanted anything. Then, I presume for the purpose of taking my mind off the oil (because after all I suppose George thought a girl's nerves could not be trusted if she knew there was trouble), George suggested to me that I go in the rear and serve some sandwiches and beef broth and then for me to take a nap.

We both felt that we would have the hardest part of the flight during the night, which would soon come on and we both wanted to be on the alert.

I worked back to the rear and untied one package of sandwiches and served George a small amount of beef broth and a drink of coffee and then went forward to the wheel.

George unwrapped his swiss cheese sandwich and I chose a chicken sandwich. I took one bite which was all I cared for and I noticed that George was making a big face and had thrown three-quarters of his sandwich overboard.

We were not hungry. We liked the air better. We had a big laugh over all the fun that had been made of us by our friends for the amount of food we were taking when we started.

I decided to take George's advice and laid my head down on my arms on the gas tank in order to get a little sleep. I little realized then what a good sleep would have done for me during the coming night. I was unable to relax myself for longer than a very few minutes, as I was full of anticipation of what the night might bring forth.

After a real, but fruitless effort to sleep, I found myself wide awake. At George's suggestion I again took the controls and George informed me that he was going in the rear and have another drop of beef broth. He also asked me to keep the motor speeded at 1675 RPM and climbing in a normal climb.

He was gone so long that I became very curious at his stay. I turned around and looking back, saw that he had on his flying suit, which he had not been wearing during the day. He was getting ready to face some rough weather and a colder altitude. He was standing there with all the charts laid out over the gas tank and when he came forward I knew that he had prepared himself for the night's flight which we had ahead of us.

George took the controls and suggested that, since I had been flying for quite some time in comparatively light clothes, I should go back and put on my flying suit, as we were climbing into colder air and were approaching an area of low depression where we could expect the greatest trouble we might have.

The flight up to this point had been more or less of a real pleasure, in that we had had exceptionally good weather, except for head winds.

We had been in the air 23 hours, and, on account of the slow speed which we had been making due to the head winds, we knew that we would probably be at the controls for at least another 20 hours. We had conserved our gas during the day and we knew that, without any unexpected difficulties during the night, we would land at Le Bourget field, near Paris, some time late the next afternoon.

But after we figured this we both remembered the oil splashes. I felt sure they were danger spots. What we thought neither of us said. We knew we had a big night's work cut out for us.

[The next and third chapter of Ruth Elder's remarkable flight, as told by herself, will appear tomorrow.]

INJURIES IN FIRE KILL CAPTAIN

One death was on record today as a result of the fire which swept the wholesale district in the 900 block of Penn avenue early yesterday.

Capt. Harry O'Toole of No. 5 Engine Company, who lives at 407 Charles street, Knoxville, died last night from a fractured skull suffered when he and 11 companions were caught beneath a falling wall as they were fighting the flames from a blind alley off Garrison way. O'Toole, a World War veteran, had been a member of the fire department four years. He was 31 years old. He leaves his mother, three sisters and a brother. Funeral services will be held at the home Friday.

Efforts to clear up the wreckage and arrive at an accurate estimate of the loss were being made by firemen and insurance adjusters at the scene of the fire today.

Judge Harry H. Rowand showed the importance attached to the case when he ordered the jury, composed of six men and six women, with Mrs. Mathilda E. McLaughlin, of 315 Eighth avenue, Homestead, as the foreman, locked up during the trial, expected to last two or three days, an unusual procedure outside of murder trials.

The State, according to Park's outline to the jury, will prove that fraudulent returns from the Sixteenth district gave Daniel Malie the nomination for Legislature over Frank J. Zak for the second nomination.

The defendants are represented by Attorneys Charles B. Prichard, former city solicitor, and Ben Lencher, former assistant district Attorny.

The rounds of pleasure that confront any girl or are denied any girl rambling through New York's every-day and every-night life are embodied in it. Few girls have the resourcefulness of Margie, yet many have had the same opportunities. It never pays to miss so glittering a story. You start when it starts—Thursday.

SALARY BOOST CONSIDERED

City Council, sitting as a finance committee, today was scheduled to discuss an ordinance introduced yesterday which would boost the salaries of Council members from the present rate of $6,500 to $8,000 a year. The increase is authorized by an act of the last session of Legislature, but carries a provision that Council members cannot grant themselves increases after their election.

This rovision may effectually block the increase of at least five of the members of Council. They are P. J. McArdle, John S. Herron, W. Y. English, Harry A. Little and James F. Malone. Their terms do not expire as do the terms of the other four members. The others, President Daniel Winters, Robert Garland, Robert Alderdice and Charles Anderson, are practically unopposed for election at the November election, and if the ordinance introduced yesterday is passed before that time, they legally can accept the increase.

One plan to take care of the five who apparently are left out in the cold until re-election is to have them resign and then be re-elected immediately by their fellow councilmen. But there is always a chance that the re-election part of the latter plan might slip a cog and one or more of the councilmen in this mdtter would find themselves completely out. Hence other means of sidestepping the provision of the act are being sought.

Seriously Burned

MRS. AIMEE SEMPLE M'PHERSON

Aimee Semple McPherson today was reported responding satisfactorily to treatment at Mount Wilson for severe burns and shock suffered Thursday, last, when an electrical device she was using to treat a cold at Angelus Temple, Los Angeles, became short circuited. The evangelist has been using the appartus in the evening and at about three o'clock the next morning, her secretary, Miss Emma Schaffer, was awakened by a muffled scream to find Mrs. McPherson helpless in the folds of the overheated equipment. Before the current was turned off, the evangelist was severely burned. She

Grid Victim's Father Asks Games Go On

Because, he said, it would have been his son's wish, Emil Boroski, of Natrona, father of Harry Boroski, 19, Har-Brac High School senior, who died Sunday night from injuries suffered in a football game Saturday, asked that a proposal to discontinue the football schedule be dropped.

In compliance with his request, members of the joint school board of Harrison township and Brackenridge borough, along with members of the football team, last night voted to play the remaining games.

Three members of the squad of 43 reported denial of parental consent to play football as a result of Boroski's death from injuries suffered in the game with Turtle Creek High School. Members of the Har-Brac High in a body will attend funeral services for Boroski tomorrow morning in St. Ladislaw's Polish Catholic Church, Natrona.

NEED FUND FOR CITY'S WATER

Curtailment of water service to the danger point was given as the only alternative to a special appropriation of $32,120 asked of City Council by Director of Public Works Edward G. Lang. Increased cost of soda ash and essential equipment costs were given as the cause.

The director also asked for $162,000 for the Bureau of Highways and Sewers to keep it on full time until December 31, or $71,500 for half time.

WARD CHIEF IS GIVEN FREEDOM

George A. Faber, Jr., of 1451 Fayette street, North Side, who fell mortally wounded under a fusillade of bullets as he stood with a group of friends in Gallagher's store, 2201 Penn avenue, on the night of September 16 last, "came to his death at the hands of unknown persons," a coroner's jury found today. Paddy Colangelo, who has been in jail on suspicion of the police that he was implicated in the murder, was discharged.

The only testimony adduced at the inquest that involved Colangelo was given by Traffic Policeman C. F. Haas, who said that he saw Colangelo's automobile in the neighborhood at the time of the shooting and knew, because of some political disturbances that had occurred shortly before, that he was there "for no good."

Louis Little, attorney for Colangelo, asked Haas if he did not belong to a political faction in the Strip opposed to that with which Colangelo is connected. Coroner W. J. McGregor would not permit the question to be answered, and ruled out all testimony bearing on the political aspects of the affair on the ground that it was not relevant.

Williams has offered a reward of $100 for the arrest and conviction of a hit-and-run driver who struck the Mayor's automobile, almost resulting fatally to Mrs. Williams. Mellon or Hughes Is Brisbane's Tip to Will BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Oct. 18.—Had lunch with Mr. Brisbane yesterday. He seems sure Coolidge won't run. He thinks it will be Mellon or Hughes against Smith. He thinks next year will be very prosperous in spite of election.

WILL ROGERS.

Brisbane has built a home on the edge of the Mojave desert. He is going to build some homes there for retired firemen. Can you imagine a fireman retiring to go to the Mojave desert? He will think he is fighting a fire yet.

Brisbane is strong for California, but says the real money in real estate is to be made between Thirty-fourth and Fifty-ninth streets, New York.

Yours,
WILL.

CONGRESSMAN FOUND SAFE

CHICAGO, Oct. 18.—(AP.)—The airplane in which Congressman F. H. Laguardia of New York started yesterday noon from Superior, Wis., for Cleveland, and which was reported missing last night, was safe in a hangar at the Chicago air mail field today.

Unfavorable weather conditions compelled the Congressman and Lieut. M. L. Elliott, his pilot, to stop overnight here.

Fears had been felt for the Congressman's safety when his friends failed to locate him last night.

Farmers Asking Closed Season On Cows

BENTLEYVILLE, Pa., Oct. 18.—"This is a cow. Please do not shoot."

Such labels on the mild-eyed live stock of this section seemed a possibility today as newly formed "Farmers' Protective Associations" sought ways and means of preserving their farm animals from the ravages of the over enthusiastic "city" hunter who in the past has mistaken their cows and chickens for deer, or buffalo or something.

The hunting season opens November 1, which means that the population of this section will be quadrupled temporarily.

SAYS WIFE WED CRIPPLED VET "FOR FUN"

"She said she married him 'just for fun,'" Mrs. Anna Moore told Judge Ambrose B. Reid when she testified this morning in the divorce proceedings through which her brother, Frank X. Dixon, a crippled World War veteran, is seeking to divorce his wife, Mrs. Dorothy Moore Dixon. The Dixons were married while Dixon was convalescing in the West Penn Hospital from an operation in which his right leg was amputated.

With a group of friends they held a wedding supper. Dixon returned to the hospital and once after that Dixon's bride visited him there. Since then he has not seen her, he testified in support of his charge of desertion.

Mrs. Moore said she heard the bride making light of the marriage. A decision in the case will be announced later. Dixon, whose home address is 1914 Kirkbride street, has been treated in 25 hospitals for the wounds he received in action in the war. At the time of the marriage, his wife was a telephone operator at the Presbyterian Hospital.

TAX OFFICIAL'S BOOKS SHORT

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., Oct. 18.—Charges of embezzlement of public funds and fraudulent conversion were on file here today against Ludwig C. Trose, member of a prominent local family and formerly delinquent tax collector of Cambria county. Informations made by County Controller Henry L. Cannon declare Trose' accounts show a total shortage of $36,000 from 1923 to 1926. The alleged peculations were revealed in an audit ordered when the office of delinquent tax collector was ordered abandoned by legislative action.

MAY FINISH JOURNEY IN PLANE

By International News Service.

HORTIA, The Azores, Oct. 18. — Bidding farewell to this little port and to its inhabitants who fairly outdid themselves to welcome her in royal fashion, Miss Ruth Elder, with Capt. George Haldeman, today was on her way to Paris.

The Portuguese mail steamer, Lima, carrying the two American fliers, pulled out of the harbor here at daybreak bound for Lisbon. From there Miss Elder will continue to Paris.

When Ruth embarked she set out for her original destination—Paris. Her sailing last night was another stage of her journey to France which started out so well when her plane, the American Girl, rose out over Long Island, and which almost ended in tragedy when the plane failed over the Atlantic Ocean. She and Haldeman were saved by the Dutch tanker Barendrecht, which brought them here.

Miss Elder and Haldeman boarded the Lima last night and were given a hearty farewell by the Governor and all the inhabitants of Fayal. Before retiring, Miss Elder told the International News Service:

"I love Fayal, but I am longing to be in Europe."

When the daring girl flier reaches Lisbon she will be met by an airplane, which Haldeman will pilot to Paris. The plane was to leave Paris for Lisbon today.

Ruth's stay here ended in a round of entertainments and farewells. Among the last to bid them goodby was the crew of the German Junkers plane.

FIND BODY NEAR TRACKS

A well-dressed unidentified man, 45, was found dead beside the tracks of the Pittsburgh & Lake Erie Railroad just west of the Twenty-fifth street subway today. Morgue officials said he was struck by a train. A meal ticket for the Steel Mill restaurant at Twenty-eight and Carson streets and an instruction book from the Pressed Steel Car Company were found in his clothing.

Ten Women Call Chicagoan, 32, Husband

CHICAGO, Oct. 18.—(AP.)—Women have caused Alfred Herbert, 32, more or less concern, if the police account of his being married to 10 of them at the same time is accurate.

Thus it was something of a circumstance that his arrest on a bigamy charge late yesterday was made by a woman police officer. The policewoman, with drawn revolver, arrested Herbert in front of a loop office building where he was employed as private watchman.

His father, Frank Herbert, said he knew of "at least six wives" of his son. Two "Mrs. Herberts" met at the police station and by comparing notes and information brought the total to 10.

Coeds Fail To Attend Frosh Party

There was a noticeable lack of that other sex in the party of 60 medical upper classmen and faculty members of University of Pittsburgh which attended the Alvin Theater last night to see what they could see of "Artists and Models."

The upper classmen were the guests of the freshmen medical students. And the frosh had nothing to say or do about it but pay the check—and stay at home with ponderous text books. It's an annual custom, this forced-guest business.

Now there are four or five fair ones among the sophomore meds. Free tickets for the revue were theirs, even without the asking. And were they there last night?

BABCOCK POINTS TO WORKS

ASKS ELECTION TO ASSURE PROGRAM

In voting for county commissioners at the election next month the citizens of Allegheny county will decide whether the program of road, bridge, tunnel and park development inaugurated by the present commissioners shall be carried to a successful conclusion, said Commissioner E. V. Babcock at a meeting at Republican headquarters in the Hotel Henry at noon today.

A few years ago, he asserted, the factionalism which had retarded the county's progress was eliminated and a forward movement started. Much has been accomplished, and while it is true that taxes have been increased it is to be borne in mind, said Babcock, that notwithstanding that because of its topography, highway building is probably more costly here than in any other county in the United States, Allegheny county enjoys one of the lowest tax rates in Pennsylvania.

Babcock pointed with pride to the county parks, creations of the present commissioners, "where the people of this great industrial center may retreat from the humdrum of workaday life and commune with nature in those vast playgrounds that they may justly call their own."

He bade the voters not to let themselves be swayed by the "wild recriminations" and "mud-slinging sensationalism" of candidates "whose sole aim is to gain public office" and who seek to blind the people to "the true issues of this campaign."

"The program of improvements of the present board of county commissioners," said Babcock, "is manifest in every part of the county. If continued in office, the commissioners will extend that program, not extravagantly, but as common sense and sound judgment shall dictate, to the full development of our county, keeping always in mind that our taxes must be kept at the lowest possible figure.

"Allegheny county, as a community of wealth, of solidity, of achievement and outstanding importance in world affairs, must keep in the forefront or be a reflection upon the intelligence of its citizens. The interests of our people are community interests. Our interests are most closely concerned with the development of the county into the best possible place in which to work, to live and to rear our families.

"If every citizen, before voting, resolves that he will do the most good for himself and his county with his ballot, I am confident that the Republican administration will be continued."

3 ESCAPE AS AUTO PLUNGES DOWN BANK

CONNELLSVILLE, Pa., Oct. 18.—Two brothers and their sister had narrow escapes from death when their automobile plunged over a 20-foot embankment. Robert F. Alpern, 19, with William Alpern, 21, and their sister were ascending Apple street when the coupe ran out of gasoline and started backing down the hill. William and the girl jumped. Robert turned the machine against a curb, but the car sped on, and as it dropped down the embankment he jumped. At the bottom of the embankment the auto crashed into an old cistern.

Try This Before Making Engine Repairs

Check the ignition and look the spark plugs over whenever the engine falls short of the fine performance that it once had.

Many times expensive repair bills are incurred and it is afterwards found that all that was needed was a new set of spark plugs. This because all spark plugs in time deteriorate and need to be replaced.

When you buy spark plugs, be sure to insist on AC—the make on which Lindbergh, Chamberlin, Byrd and other great flyers staked their lives—and you will be sure of perfect spark plug performance.

Your dealer has the right type and size for your engine—ASK HIM.

SAY POLICE TOOK INJURED MAN FROM BED

Another example of alleged police disregard of the physical condition of defendants was being investigated today as a result of a complaint lodged against Alfred Bassett, police captain in the former Carrick district, by Mrs. Daniel Chisholm.

Mrs. Chisholm charges that Bassett removed her son, William Chisholm, 26, from his home at 26 Nobles lane, Carrick, where he was lying critically ill with a fractured skull suffered in an automobile accident. Although advised that a physician, Dr. D. L. Rectenwald of Warrington avenue, had ordered that no attempt be made to move the patient even to another room, Mrs. Chisholm declares, the police took him to the Carrick Police Station, kept him there all night without medical attention and forced him to appear in Traffic Court the next morning. He now is in the South Side Hospital in a critical condition.

A 10-year financial plan for the City of Pittsburgh to permit the uninterrupted progress of civic improvements without impoverishing the public treasury or taxing the capacity of the bonding power is to be developed by a committee of experts here following approval of the project by Mayor Charles H. Kline.

The proposition was submitted by the Pittsburgh Bureau of Governmental Research, established here about a year ago to study the city's needs and make recommendations for civic betterment.

Members of the committee named by the Mayor include H. C. McEldowney and these members of the bureau: C. D. Armstrong, A. E. Braun, J. F. Casey, George S. Davison and Howard Heinz. H. O. Evans, secretary-treasurer of the bureau, will serve as secretary of the committee.

FLED FLATIRON, HE CHARGES

"My wife chased me with a flatiron, broke $25 worth of dishes she hurled at me, some of which struck me, hit me on the head with a broom handle, making me dizzy, and threatened to cut my heart out, saying other women had done it and got away with it."

In substance, George E. Harding of Copeland street, North Braddock, poured that tale of woe into the ears of Judge Ambrose B. Reid, who heard Harding's application for divorce from his wife, Gussie M. Harding. But before Harding told his story the latter's daughter, aged 11, was ordered into the judges' chamber.

"It's not right that this child should hear the troubles of her father and mother," said the court, and counsel agreed with him. After Harding had told his story Judge Reid refused to hear the child, saying "It's not necessary."

WOMAN'S HUNCH STOPS ESCAPE

MERCER, Pa., Oct. 18.—An undefined psychological reaction to "trouble in the air," developed during four years as matron in the jail here, resulted in frustration of the two attempted jail-breaks here recently by Mrs. W. A. Bine. All day Thursday, Mrs. Bine says, she had been conscious of "something wrong" and was not surprised when she found herself wide awake listening to the faint scratching of hack-saws on iron during the night. The noise was caused by prisoners attempting to saw their way to freedom. She had a similar "hunch" in 1924 when she stopped the jail break of two murderers.

GRIDDER FINED AFTER RIOT

Joseph Zuzak, 25, of 210 Ella street, charged with starting the riot which ended a football game between two independent teams at Martins Field, Park View, Sunday, was fined $10 on a charge of inciting riot and held for court on a charge of aggravated assault and battery last night at a hearing before Justice of the Peace Patrick Collins, of Sharpsburg.

The charges were made by Harry A. Mercer, referee of the game, who testified that Zuzak, a member of one of the teams, started the disturbance by attacking him for penalizing Zuzak's team.

Cowboy 85 Years Hurt in Fall From Bed

By Universal Service

CHILDRESS, Tex., Oct. 18.—For 85 years Reese Barton, 97, the world's oldest active cowboy, has punched longhorns on the plains of West Texas without a mark on his hide to show for it.

He has "broken" outlaws and "bulldogged" unruly steers without his hair losing its natural part. Only yesterday, he roped a calf and dipped him as niftily as a 20-year-old cowboy would have done.

But today, Reese met his Waterloo. He fell out of bed and fractured his collarbone.

"Can you beat it?" Barton exclaimed after surgeons had bound up the broken bone. "Here I bin ridin' the range for 85 years, rode it all day yesterday with my legs forked over the back of a wall-eyed cayuse, and I hadda go and fall outta bed."

Style and Proportion

The Keynote of Successful Dress

When Madame chooses her new wardrobe her first thought is of style—color, design, and that all-important item—lines! Her attention is next centered on her undergarment, the foundation of her gown's beauty. Does it match the new gowns in style and design? Does it mold the figure into proportioned lines of graceful slenderness, even though Madame may be more than the average size?

So closely allied is the foundation garment to the outer apparel that expert advice is essential in making one's decision. A corps of able fitters are at your service.

Perhaps you need a Pompadour step-in, lovely with its hand-fashioned elastic and clever features for unusual control. $16.50.

Or a Lily of France front clasp girdle of beautiful silk brocade and French hand-knit elastic. $18.50.

If your figure requires an all-in-one foundation garment there are lovely ones here in a number of different styles and designs, $10.00 to $89.50.

COURT REOPENS PACKER CASE

By Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 18.—Announcement was made by the United States Supreme Court that it will review the whole question of revocation of the "consent decree" under which Swift and Co. and Armour and Co., and other meat packers were enjoined from engaging in canned goods and other "unrelated" business.

Chief Justice Taft said the court will hear arguments on the case January 2.

The District of Columbia Court of Appeals had certified the case to the high court, asking rulings on questions of jurisdiction involved. The companies had claimed that the district court was without authority to consider the case.

The district court issued the consent order in February, 1920.

TERMINAL COAL ANNOUNCES NEW WAGE SLASH

12 TO 17 CENTS UNDER UNION RATE

A new wage scale, bringing a further reduction from the rate of the Jacksonville agreement, was in effect at the mines of the Pittsburgh Terminal Coal Corporation in this district today.

Notices posted by the corporation announce the new scale. It gives 65 cents per ton to hand-drillers and loaders of machine-cut coal, and 94 cents per ton for pick mining. The Jacksonville scale is 77.5 cents for machine loaders and $1.11 for pick miners. When the Pittsburgh Terminal Company resumed operations on an open-shop basis, it paid 71 cents per ton for machine loaders and $1.01 for pick miners.

It also was reported that day wages at the company's mines had been reduced from $6.75 to $6 per day, although this announcement was not included in the posted notice.

The Terminal company recently won a suit for a temporary federal injunction restraining the United Mine Workers of America from further interference with its operations. The Terminal and several other companies in this district are engaged in court proceedings aimed at evicting union miners from company houses to make room for new employes. Union miners, financed by their unions, are building barracks at the various mines to house families so evicted. Such construction is under way at Russelton and Broughton.

The latest eviction suit was filed yesterday by the Republic Iron and Steel Company. It was directed against 224 families occupying company houses at the company's mines at Russelton.

VOTE QUIZ JURY LOCKED UP

Six men and six women, selected today as a jury in the long delayed trial of two election board officers of the Sixteenth District, Twenty-second Ward, and a city fire captain for alleged irregularities in the Spring primary of 1926, were ordered locked up at the conclusion of each day's sessions. Judge Harry H. Roward, hearing the case, made the order to prevent possibilities of "tampering" because of the political significance of the trial. Ordinarily, such precautions are taken only in murder cases.

The defendants, charged with having thrown the district's ballots into a sewer, are Mrs. Anna Conlin and J. William Bolster, members of the board, and Fire Capt. Charles Golden. Alvin Miller, judge of the district, and P. J. Downey also are named in the indictment, but Miller has never been apprehended and Downey obtained a severance.

Bolster was convicted last week of false pretense for accepting $10 from the county as payment for the services of Charles Carr on the election board. Carr, it was shown, does not exist.

WANTS PUBLIC TO SCAN PROBE

Distribution of 200,000 copies of the testimony taken in the county audit probe instigated by Controller Charles C. McGovern, "so that voters may read and learn for themselves," has been demanded of the county commissioners by the McGovern-Shields campaign executive committee, Senator C. M. Barr revealed in an address before the Squirrel Hill Men's Club last night.

"I am convinced," Barr declared, "that if the public could read this testimony, the county commissioners would be so discredited that no other word need be spoken in this campaign to insure the overwhelming victory of Mr. McGovern and Mr. Shields."

Parking Rules at Churches Are Drawn

A special set of unofficial parking regulations have been laid down for the members of Sacred Heart Roman Catholic Church and of Calvary Protestant Episcopal Church by the pastors of the two congregations.

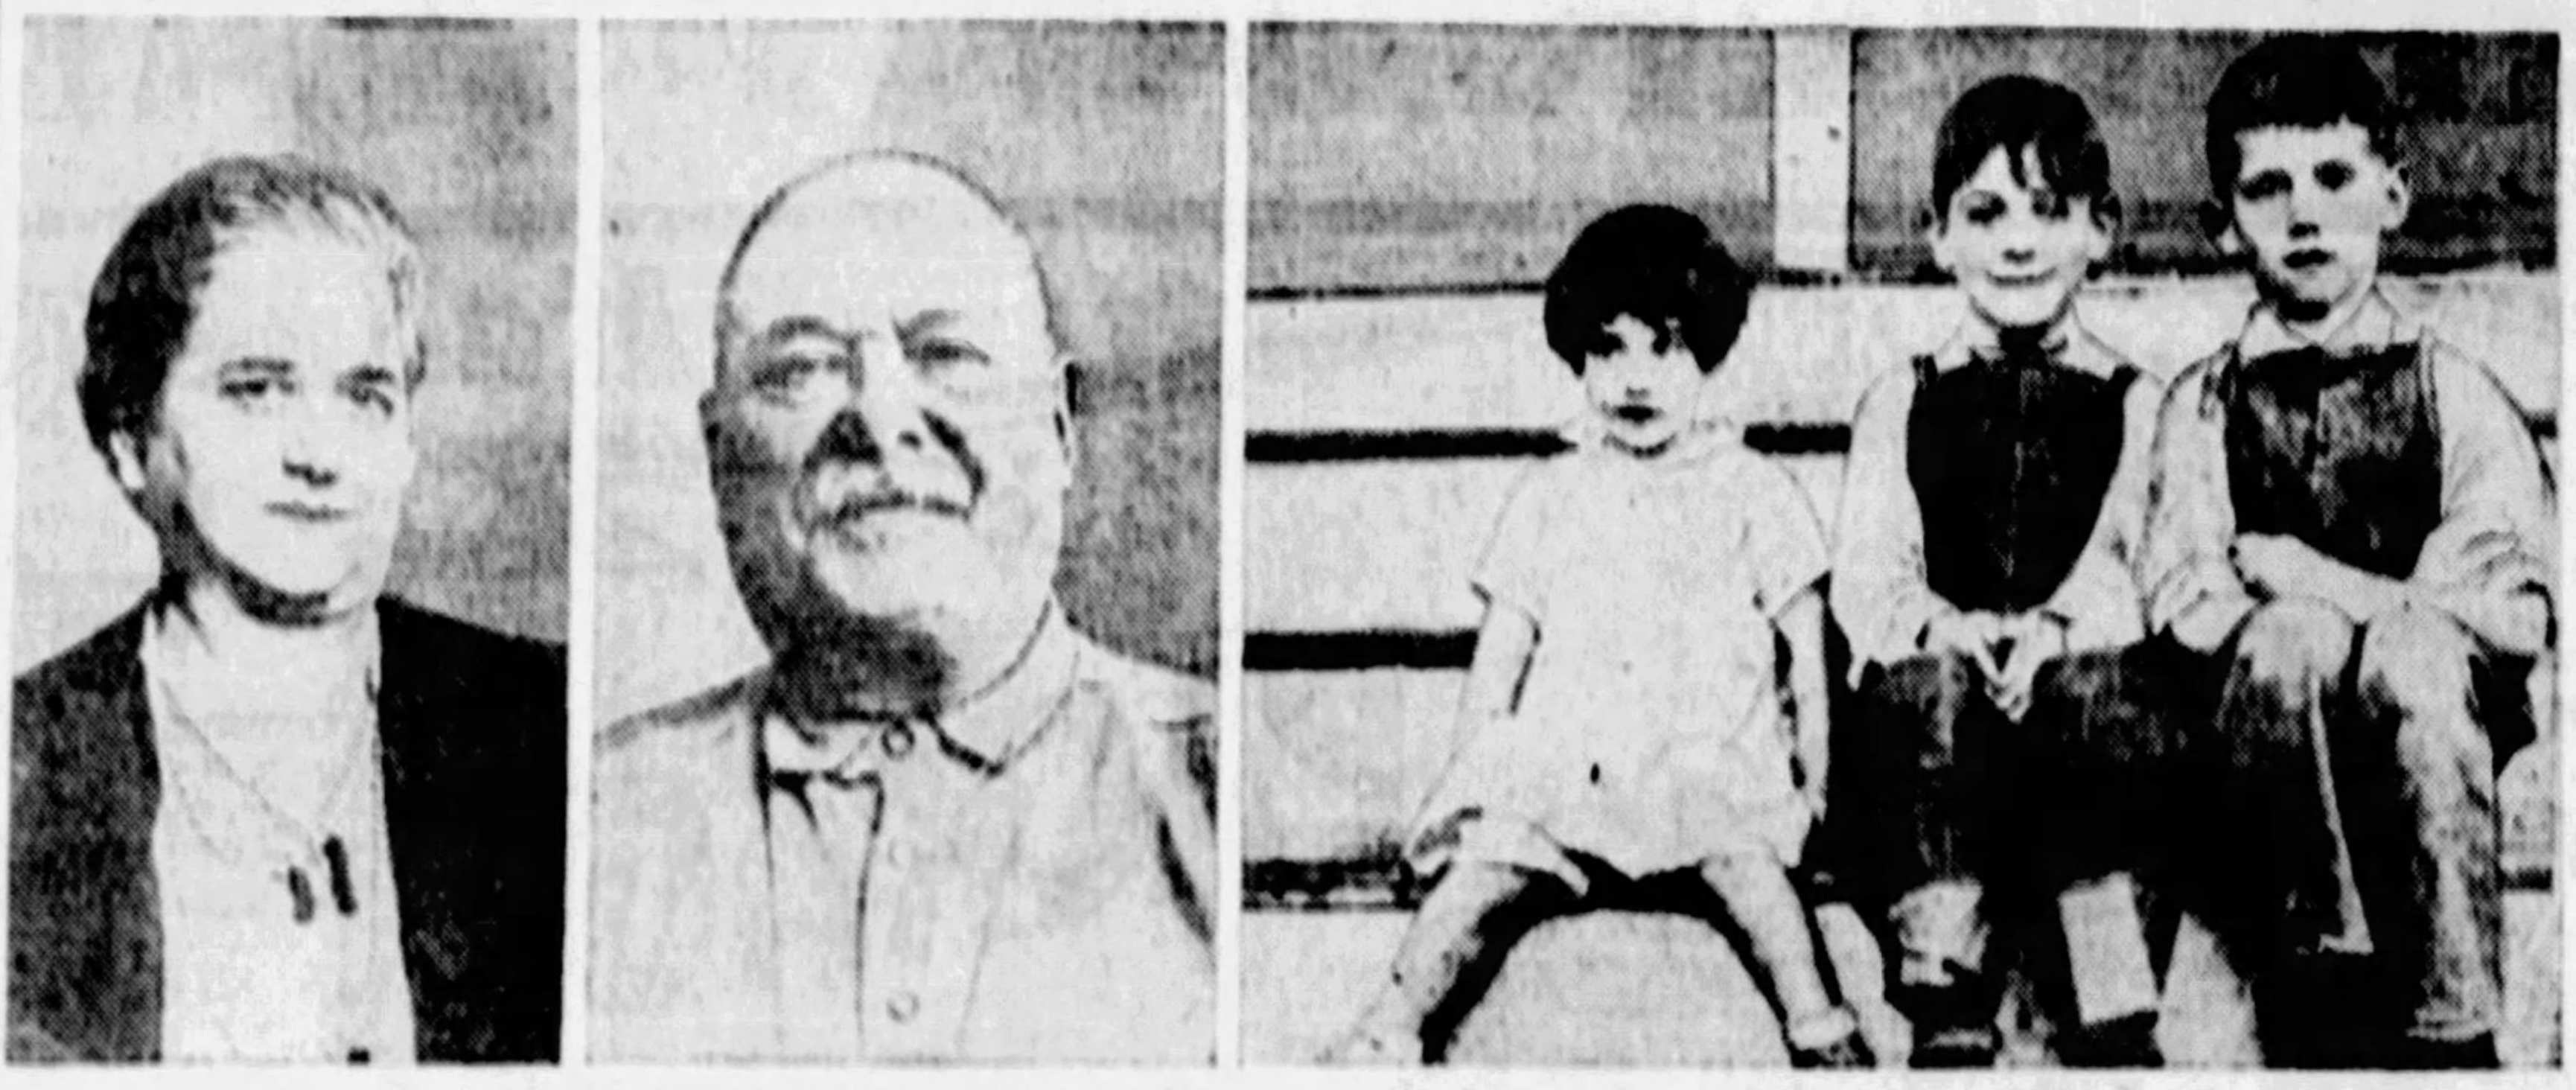
The two churches are on opposite sides of Shady avenue. Under the agreement made by the Rev. Dr. E. J. VanEtten, of Calvary church, and the Rev. Dr. Thomas F. Coakley, of Sacred Heart, members of Calvary church will park on the eastern side of the street and members of Sacred Heart on the western. Explicit instructions in the matter have been issued to the congregations in pamphlet form.

MOVE TO PROTECT CITY FROM BLAST LITIGATION

An ordinance to protect the city from damage suits when automobiles explode on city streets is to be introduced by Councilman W. Y. English after a conference with City Solicitor Charles A. Waldschmidt. This action follows a damage award of $15,000 granted last week to Richey Bonach, II, and his father, Gust, of Thirty-seventh street, after the boy was injured by the explosion of a gasoline tank in a car parked on the street by a junk dealer, who was destroying it with acetylene torches.

America and its girls have been challenged for being "money mad." "It Never Pays," new serial starting Thursday in The Sun-Telegraph, presents some of the phases of this "money madness." Read it from the beginning.

MAY SHARE IN $2,000,000,000 ESTATE



MRS. EMMA EMERICH YOUNG, GEORGE EMERICH AND GRANDCHILDREN

If their claim to direct lineage from John Emerich, a partner of John Jacob Astor, is upheld, this Boston family will share in an estate now estimated at $2,000,000,000. The estate has been accumulating for 70 years.

COLLECTOR JAILED FOR TAKING FUNDS

Sylvester J. Albrecht, of 112 West Stockton avenue, North Side, was committed to jail for 90 days by Judge James R. Macfarlane in Criminal Court after entering a plea of guilty to the embezzlement, June 9, of $55 from the Nielen Company, of 319 Liberty avenue, which had employed him as a collector. Company officials charged that he embezzled collections aggregating $329.

PARENTS ASK CITY PAY FOR PLAYGROUND HURTS

City Council is considering the payment of two claims filed by parents of youths injured in city playgrounds. L. A. Hoffman asked $45 for medical attention to his son, Ralph, injured at the Wabash playground July 27. Edward Collins asked $76 for injuries sustained by his son when struck in the mouth with a baseball at the Burgwin playground in July.

TROLLEY RIDERS ENTER SUITS FOR $60,000

Jane Morris and David Morris, her husband, have entered suit in Common Pleas Court for $40,000 joint damages against the Pittsburgh Railways Company. They allege that while they were passengers on a street car last July 4 the woman was hurled from her seat and suffered severe personal injuries.

Mary Crowley asks $20,000 damages from the same company for injuries suffered October 14, 1925, when, she alleges, while alighting from a car at Harwood street she was thrown violently to the ground.

Frank Magidson entered suit against the Yellow Cab Company for $15,000 damages for personal injuries. He alleges that last January 7 a cab collided with his machine, injuring him.

Edward K. Jacob and Frances M. Jacob, his wife, entered suit in Common Pleas Court against Frederick V. Wooldridge in which they ask joint damages of $50,000. They allege that last April Mrs. Jacob, who was about to become a mother, consulted the defendant, a physician. The plaintiffs allege that Dr. Wooldridge was negligent in taking care of the woman plaintiff during the birth of her child, and that she suffered the loss of a leg because of said neglect.

Frank Pepper entered suit for $5,000 damages against the Pennsylvania Railroad Company for personal injuries. The plaintiff alleges while riding on a train he was thrown against the side of a car, suffering severe hurts.

Mrs. Elizabeth Holtzgraver, in behalf of her son, Frederick J. Albinger, 17, asks $5,000 damages for injuries received by the boy from Harry W. Taylor, 542 California avenue, Avalon. The plaintiff alleges that last June 25 Taylor hired Albinger to do some painting and that while on a ladder 25 feet from the ground the ladder slipped and the boy was thrown to the ground.

KLEIN'S WATERPROOF SOLES

(Advertisement.)

TO DARKEN HAIR APPLY SAGE TEA

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea with sulphur added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant. Just a few applications will prove a revelation if your hair is fading, streaked or gray. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get a bottle of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound at any drug store all ready for use for only 75 cents. This is the old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients.

While wispy, gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant.

CONSERVATION LESSON TAUGHT BY GERMANY

Today America imports paper from Germany. The paper is made out of wood—whole forests. And yet, all Germany is not so big as Texas. That's what conservation and reforestation will do. Our great forests in the United States, our oil supplies and our water power sites have been eaten into in such ruthless fashion that the history of American waste is appalling.

Ask Your Friends and Neighbors

For 20 years Tanlac has been helping sick people back to health and strength. Your own druggist has sold hundreds of bottles of it. In your own neighborhood, there are doubtless many hearty, happy men and women who had suffered for years, tried scores of medicines—and at last found in Tanlac a sure, permanent relief for their ailments. Just ask them.

They will be as enthusiastic as Mr. Richard Deer, 1342 Goettman St., Troy Hill, Pittsburgh, Pa. "For two years I was a great sufferer from indigestion. I would get dizzy and after meals I felt I was going to smother. Tanlac put me back on my feet. Now I enjoy hearty meals with no ill effects."

If you are sick, weak, thin and rundown, give Tanlac a chance to help you. It is wonderful for indigestion and constipation—gas, pains, nausea, dizziness and headaches. It brings back lost appetite, helps you digest your food, and gain strength and weight. It contains no mineral drugs; it is made of roots, barks and herbs, nature's own medicines for the sick. Get a bottle from your druggist today; your money back if it doesn't help you.

P. R. R. KILLS "STRIP" BOULEVARD PROJECT

WHITER FAVORS LIBERTY AVE. CLOSING

His statement was made at a meeting to discuss the approved plan of improving Spring way from Eleventh to Sixteenth streets, for which the railroad will pay in return for the abandonment of Liberty avenue between Eleventh and Sixteenth streets. Council agreed to study the new plan and obtain estimates of its cost. It was admitted that there is small likelihood of funds being available for several years.

PADLOCKS STAY ON 'GINGERALE' CABARETS

By Universal Service

WASHINGTON, Oct. 18.—Two Chicago restaurant owners lost in appeals to the United States supreme court for a review of lower court orders "padlocking" their establishments for supplying ginger ale, cracked ice and glasses for guests desiring to make "high balls" with their own liquor.

Mike Fritzel, proprietor of the "Friars' Inn," and William R. Rothstein, the "Moulin Rouge," failed to impress the high court with the arguments that the district and circuit courts at Chicago had treated them unjustly in "padlocking" their restaurants for a year.

They were convicted upon testimony of prohibition agents that they had seen ginger ale, cracked ice and glasses—called the "setup" for mixing alcoholic drinks—served by waiters to guests.

Fritzel and Rothstein contended that they were not responsible should their patrons bring liquor into their establishments and drink it there. They argued that the prohibition law does not prohibit restaurants from selling ginger ale or cracked ice and providing glasses to customers.

Their brief and also the reply of the government argued mainly on the meaning and application of the word "kept" in section 21 of the Volstead law.

The restaurateurs contended that "kept" means supplied by the proprietor in a commercial transaction.

Guests at their places brought liquor and "kept" it there for illegal purposes, said the government. The government said that Fritzel was observed watching "set-ups" being provided, and that had waiters in Rothstein's restaurant were seen observing "high-ball" being made by guests.

CANDIDACIES ILLEGAL, RULE

Judge A. B. Reid, in Common Pleas Court Monday, after a hearing declared null and void the nomination papers of three candidates of the Liberty party of Elizabeth township, and issued an order prohibiting the County Commissioners from printing the names on the official ballot. The candidates affected are D. R. Patterson, for justice of the peace; John Baer, for constable, and Randolph Wycoff, for township treasurer.

It was brought out at the hearing that after electors had signed nomination papers for Wycoff, individually, the names of Patterson and Baer had been added. The court took the view that fraud had been committed and invalidated the nomination papers.

Song, Dance, Mirth, Splendor, and Three Hours of Them, in New "Artists and Models"

By GEORGE SEIBEL

FROM eight-fifteen until past eleven-thirty the audience at the Alvin Theater last night gasped and roared alternately as the latest edition of "Artists and Models" was unfolded scene by scene. It is a scintillating riot of colors and whirling limbs, a bomb of laughter and lights, a tornado of scenic and sartorial splendor. Comedy, dancing, sentiment, jazz—everything that could be poured into the cauldron of three hours, was there in full measure. It is a gorgeous aphrodisiac and a gale of laughing gas.

GEORGE SEIBEL

There are some things in this revue that are almost perfect of their kind. Such is the Chinese pantomime called "The Love Boat," in which Catherine Gallimore and Jan Oyra did some marvelous mimicry. Such is the football skit in which Jack Pearl as the Sophomore provides material for explosive mirth. Such is the beautiful scene of the Tree of Life, with girls budding from the branches. Such is the series of tableaux symbolizing music, especially the first, in which Chauncey Parsons as the Cantor sang Hebrew melodies, and the last, in which the Rheims Cathedral was represented in impressive Gothic fashion.

With all this magnificence and rich atmosphere, the few lapses from good taste may be overlooked. Jack Osterman has one scene, entitled "Five Hundred Dollars," which goes back to the days of Boccaccio and the Queen of Navarre, and wasn't very funny even then. Jack Pearl has one joke in the night club skit that ought to be relegated to the sort of night club where it belongs. But such lapses are few and tucked away in corners of the exhibition where only the sophisticates can scent them. The revue as a whole is a thing of beauty and joy, kaleidoscopic in color and pulsating with rhythm, replete with every kind of thrill and sparkle.

Ted Lewis and his musical clowns are deserving of special praise. The overworked saxophone and the sentimental recitation acquire a new validity through this interlude, which almost stopped the performance. Lewis is a real actor as well as a musician. As for Jack Pearl, he is as droll and infectious as ever, though some of his witticisms date back to Joe Miller and his dialect to Weber and Fields. And Florence Moore holds her own in every scene she has—a rough diamond, sometimes a little too rough, but then the inmates of a ladies' seminary are not going to "Artists and Models" to be uplifted and imbibe culture.

Wonderful dancing, music that warms your marrow, costumes that are a revelation, stage settings that are like glimpses of the Arabian Nights, and clowning that might evoke mirth from a mummy—such is this edition of "Artists and Models," three hours and more of it, which never wearied the audience. There isn't an ounce of ennui in the long evening, though one might complain that there is a slight overdose of paprika.

With Drama -:- Helps Musical Comedy -:- Review Star

HOWARD LANG, member of the cast of "The Medicine Man," dramatic production with which the Pitt opened its regular season.

OLGA ELSLER, one of the principals in "The Cocoanuts," which brought the four Marx brothers and their merry musical comedy crew back to the Nixon. Miss Elsler is a comedienne.

JACK PEARL, who shines in one of the stellar roles in "Artists and Models," showing in the Alvin even before New York has had a glimpse of it.

Golf Act Heads Program In Sheridan

Chester Horton's "Golf's Greatest Teacher" with Johnnie Small assisting in a comedy way, was featured in the Sheridan Square yesterday. He used slow motion pictures on the screen and followed with a complete demonstration. On the screen was Reginald Denny in "Out All Night." It was lots of fun. Paul Yocan assisted by Evelyn Saether, Eunice Schramm and Joe Cooney, presented an elaborate dance offering titled "Aristic Moments." Henry Regal, "The Worlds Greatest," offered gymnastic comedy, a decided novelty. Barto and Clark, in "The Milk Sheik," got laughs. Ed Illum and Sister in Xylophone Varities, John Edward Mitchell, in a new organlogue, comedy screen features and other acts complete the bill.

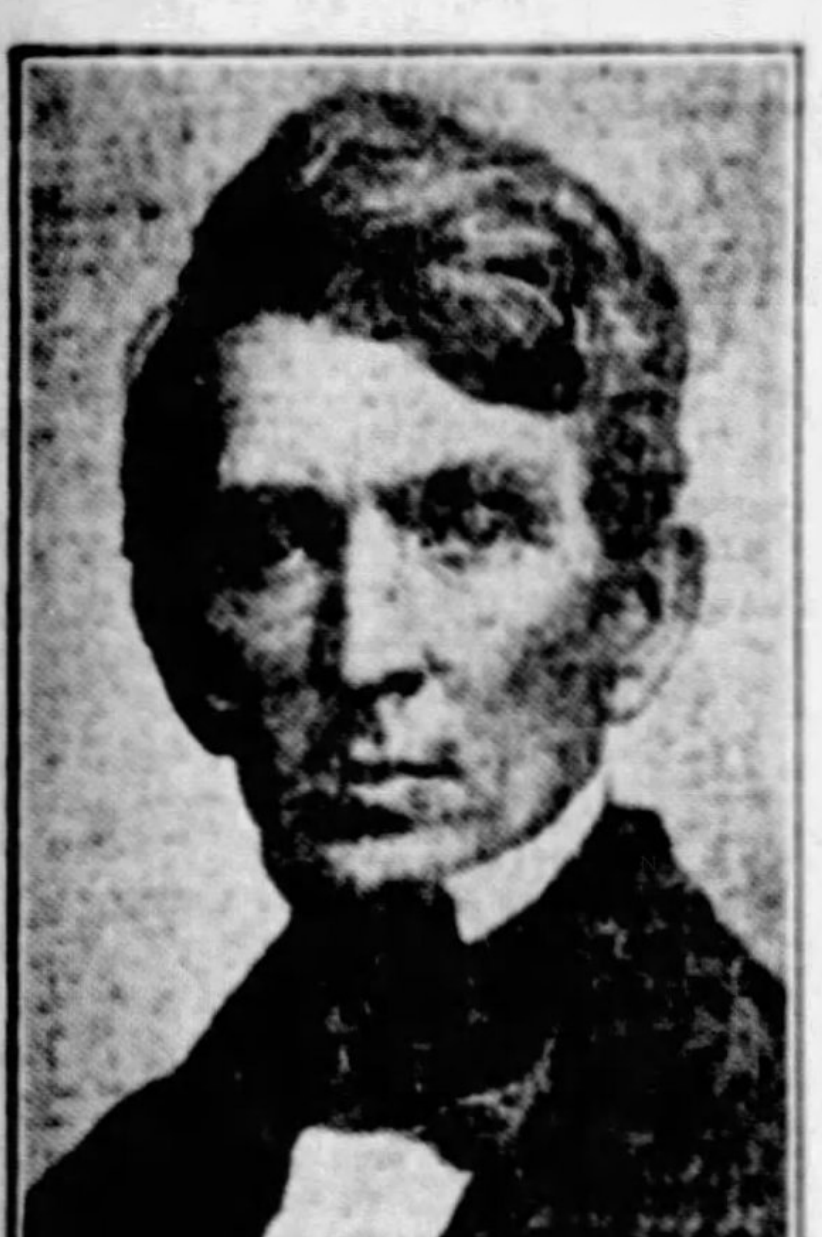
The Law Says:

Let The Buyer Beware!

WITH all the current high-power advertising and salesmanship, it is wise to be cautious when making a purchase. "Let the buyer beware" is an age-tested principle of law that merits the careful observation by everyone, particularly those who may have occasion to purchase a piano or other musical instrument for the home.

Be not allured by the sweetly worded announcements that appear in public print periodically, which offer so much in words but which convey to you ultimately so little in honest value. On the contrary, "Let the buyer beware!"

Unless you are an expert on pianos, the integrity of a firm like the C. C. Mellor Company is after all your best guaranty of quality and price.



JOHN H. MELLOR
Founder 1831

We make this statement not boastfully, but advisedly, for there are many ways in which the quality of a piano can be slighted to meet a price. And such defects or weaknesses in workmanship, construction and design are usually hidden from view until they become revealed through unsatisfactory service.

For nearly a hundred years every instrument sold by the C. C. Mellor Company has been sold "on honor"—in unvarying conformity with the principle laid down by John H. Mellor, who founded this business in the year 1831, and who was succeeded by four generations of the Mellor family. Thousands of the very best Pittsburgh families and their succeeding generations, as well as thousands from Western Pennsylvania, have and are still buying their pianos from the C. C. Mellor Company. Their generous patronage serves as proof of the fact that their instruments represent in every way all that is best in piano construction.

Almost a hundred years of accumulated knowledge and experience in the piano business of Pittsburgh has prepared the C. C. Mellor Company with the skill and ability to devise and plan an unusually small size Grand—a Piano the like of which has been the ardent dream of musicians and manufacturers of high-grade instruments for a long time. This Piano, known as the Mellor Small Grand, is being made in one of America's finest equipped factories in strict accordance to Mellor specifications.

The Small Mellor Grand—a truly charming instrument—combines superb musical performance with highest decorative value. It is perfectly proportioned and endowed with a tone of liquid purity and golden resonance that mere words are wholly inadequate to explain or describe. One can hardly conceive that such marvelous tonal power could possibly issue from a small Grand.

It will be a pleasure for you to hear the Mellor Small Grand perform. Without any obligations on your part, we shall deem it a privilege to play your favorite piece of music on the Mellor Grand any time you pay us a visit.

Good Pianos for nearly 100 years.
Lowest prices, always considering quality.
Terms arranged to your liking.

MARX BROTHERS IN NIXON

It is to laugh, for the Marx boys are with us again. Count them—Zeppo, Groucho, Chico and Harpo Marx. Their musical show, "The Cocoanuts," opened a week's engagement in the Nixon last night. This production, with its music by Irvin Berlin, had many nice things said about it when it was presented here last season. And it is deserving of flattering adjectives. First-nighters greeted its return with enthusiasm.

A semblance of a plot, involving the promotion of a lot plan in Florida, serves as a pivot around which the music and comedy revolve.

Groucho, as hotel owner and real estate booster, continues to "pun" his way through life—or rather through the show. And he has caught up with a lot of new ones since his last visit here. Harpo, with his red wig and dumb expressions, maneuvers himself into a lot of laughs. His specialty at the harp and the piano performance of Chica, of Italian dialect, are worth a curtain call or two any time. The other brother, Zeppo, pleases in a straight part.

But the Marx congregation isn't the whole show. The Lovey Sisters, in song and dance selections, are captivating. Then there are the Cansinos—Antonio and Catherine—who are keen in the art of the dance. A Porto Rico string orchestra is another specialty. Roy Strom and Olga Elsler please in solo parts. Margaret Dumont blends dignity with the Marx comedy. Others in the cast include Nell Jewel, who sings a Spanish song; Irving Kennedy, Philip Mann, Marian Benda and Edward Metcalfe.

The men of the chorus and the girls of the ensemble are capable. The costumes are new, entirely sufficient and many of them are elaborate. When it comes to cleanliness, "The Cocoanuts" is far above many other musical vehicles. The majority of lyrics and melodies are catchy and entertaining.

MR. WU FEATURE IN ALDINE

The East mixes liberally with the West in the highly entertaining and novel presentation offered on Loew's Aldine stage this week by the Honorable Mr. Wu. The Oriental star calls his act "The Feast of the Latern." But it is really a feast—and a good one at that—of American songs and dances, interpreted by a company of capable Chinese performers. Several Hawaiian and Chinese dances are introduced as well. "Midgets' Pastime," a miniature revue of comedy, dance and song, presented by a company of midgets, is another entertaining headliner on the vaudeville bill. Jean Granese, assisted by her brother, Charles, and Tito De'fiore, offer an unusual act of song and comedy. Other acts include Arthur Lloyd, "the humorous card index," and Gautiers' Phonograph Dogs. The photoplay feature is "Out All Night," which proves one of Denny's best comedies. He meets, woos and marries a girl all in one night—a night spent mostly in an apartment elevator. Many humorous situations and complications occur before the final fadeout. Short film features are on the bill.

HOW TO DARKEN GRAY HAIR

Makes One Look Younger.

Men and women who used to be called Grandpa and Grandma are now setting the styles by darkening their gray hair aat home.

For instance, J. A. McCrea, a well known Californian, recently made the following statement:

"Anyone can prepare a simple mixture in five minutes, that will darken gray hair, and make it soft and glossy. Merely take a half-pint of water, add 1 ounce of bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and ¼ ounce of glycerine.

These ingredients can be bought at any drug store at trifling cost. Apply to the hair twice weekly with a comb. It does not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and will not rub off."

'MEDICINE MAN' IN PITT

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS.

"The Medicine Man," a new play by Elliott Lester, opened the regular season of the Pitt last night. The audience, with the possible exception of one lone reviewer, seemed to like it. The writer is that reviewer and he hastens to state that he prefers that the public judge the play by the attitude of the patrons of the theater who pay their money to be entertained rather than that of one who goes in a critical capacity whose dinner may not have been digesting just as it should, anyway.

Briefly, the play is a melodrama in a Pennsylvania Dutch setting, in which a daughter of a tobacco raiser is bedeviled by her father and brother to take herself a husband. She must get out so brother can marry and bring his bride to the home as a housekeeper. First to offer himself is a neighbor boy who has had adventures with "ladies" in Lancaster. He reads his proposal right out of Cinderella and is laughed out of court. Then her widowed brother-in-law and cousin is selected by her father to be her mate and she acquiesces because she deems it her duty to take care of an idiotic son orphaned by the death of her sister.

Comes a traveling quack who sees in the girl a type better than her kinsfolk. He sympathizes with her when she needs sympathy the most and then the curtain is lowered to denote an interim. It is an interesting interim and when the curtain raises the time elapsed proves to have been tragic, for her betrothed has been killed in a quarrel and the girl will be badly in need of a husband. The medicine man induces her to reconsider the lad who has given himself the reputation of being slightly shopworn. She agrees but when he comes she theatrically declines, whereupon the medicine man declares that, contrary to the ethics of his profession, he is prepared to "do right by our Nell," and make her his wife, she being agreeable.

I judge the audience liked it because of the excellently drawn characterization and the realism of portrayal of Pennsylvania Dutch types, as well as some comedy in the lines of the "sharp-shooting" medicine man. The reviewer did not like it because, first, he did not think it is a good play, then, because it appeared to be too utterly frank and guileless in its main theme, and, finally, because it holds up the Pennsylvania Dutch, as a class, to ignominy.

Minor Watson, as Doc. Hank Harvey, the medicine man, gave a character that he picked right off the old soap box beneath the flaring gasoline torch. It was so true to the bygone old faker of real life that it is safe to wager not a few in the audience wanted to step up and be the next "lucky person" to invest the small sum of one dollar in a bottle of Chief Rattlesnake's Indian oil. The girl was played by Mayo Methot and well played. Howard Lang was her father. He is a good actor. Moffat Johnston was the cousin-brother-in-law who wanted a wife but could wait until the housekeeper's month yas up because he would have to pay her anyway.

DANCERS AND ORCHESTRA ARE SANDERS' FEATURES

Babe Bacon and Mary Lemkul, dancers, and Eddie Peyton and his Dixie Dandies Orchestra are featured in Sanders, on the Freeport highway, Aspinwall, this week. With the exception of Monday, there is dancing each week night in Sanders' in the Terrace Garden room. The glase dance floor, indirectly illuminated, is said to be one of the few of its kind in the country. Miss Bacon and Miss Lemkul are to change their repertoire at Sanders each night this week, offering specialties in interpretive and popular modern dances.

TINY MINSTRELS IN DAVIS

The biggest feature in the Davis Theater this week is also the smallest—Rose's Midgets. There are 25 of them; they sing and dance, they juggle and play the xylophone, they give a minstrel performance in the regular old style way, all but the burnt cork. All of them are foreigners but the little darky from Wheeling; the others hail from every quarter of the globe, from Italy and Germany and even Java. Their performance is exceedingly entertaining and varied. Among the other acts on the vaudeville program, that of Lester Crawford and Helen Broderick stands out by its quiet and effective comedy. The Nevins and Gordon Company have an amusing skit called "The Outside Inn," ending with knockabout tumbling that is more uproarious than refined. The Ryan Sisters dance well, and the three Whirlwinds do some acrobatic roller skating. "Figures Don't Lie" is the film feature with Esther Ralston as a stenog who is easy to look at and Richard Arlen as a fresh guy who is hard to get rid of, while Ford Sterling is the forgetful employer. But the best thing on the bill, undoubtedly, is the work of those 25 assorted mites of humanity.

HOOT GIBSON PICTURE IS CURRENT IN CAMEO

"Painted Ponies," starring Hoot Gibson, is the current feature in the Cameo. Many of the picture sequences were filmed at the famous rodeo at Saugus, Cal. Gibson, in the role of Bucky Simms, champion cowboy of the north, who drops into Toptown to compete for a rodeo trophy, does some hair-raising steer riding. Ethlyne Claire portrays the heroine, the girl who runs the merry-go-round that gives the story its name. A comedy, International News and special music complete the program.

COOPER REVIEW IN GAYETY

Jimmie Cooper's "Black and White Review" was shown in the Gayety three times yesterday, opening with a midnight show Sunday night—or Monday morning. The production gets its title from the fact that it is presented in two parts, all white performers appearing first, with Negros doing their best to take all the honors in the last half of the performance. They almost succeed. There are many good spots in the Cooper show. The most objectionable is furnished by Cooper himself, in a skit called "Flirtation." It is offensive—not to say degrading. Many of the big revues have talented performers recruited from less prominent productions and Cooper's show has a feature which may reach Broadway—even Ziegfeld—as a distinct novelty. This is the Waites family of father, mother, daughters and son, the lightest, the elder being announced as weighing 304 pounds, the others ranging up to an alleged weight of 647 pounds. Made the basis of a carnival scene, dad plays the mouth organ and the youngsters sing and dance pleasingly and surprisingly well. Among the best in the show is Cooper's own daughter, Rose Marie, peppy singing and dancing soubret. Tuxey Ondeck is versatile, playing violin, mouth organ and scoring as an athletic dancer. Jack Kogan wins appreciation in a burlesque of a has-been pugilist boxing with a phantom, the finale being a laughable travesty on the "long count" of the Dempsey-Tunney affair.

Film and Stage Attractions In Penn

Ramon Novarro, appearing in "The Road to Romance," is the motion picture feature in the Penn this week, the screen attraction being flanked by an elaborate stage presentation titled "On the Campus." "The Road to Romance," based on a Joseph Conrad novel, deals with pirates and the romance of the day when Spain ruled a Cuba that was peopled by aristocratic dons and their beautiful women. One of these families is in trouble through the plots of a dishonest governor and judge, and Jose Armando, played by Novarro, comes from Spain to help them. He arrives as a captive of the pirates, of whom the governor is the real chief. But Jose is a resourceful lad with a good sword arm and he accomplishes his purpose of defeating the governor and winning a pretty girl. Marceline Day is the girl—quite lovely. Roy D'Arcy, Marc McDermott, Cesare Gravina and Bobby Mock are in the cast. On the stage Tommy Christian and His Collegians play jazzy tunes as other performancers sing and dance. They include the Cardell Twins, very capable girl steppers; Burns and Foran, Sisters, lively dancers the Eight-Coeds, dancers; Rose and Arthur Boyland, novelty dancers, and the Ponce Sisters. It is an entertaining bill as a whole, also including M-G-M news and musical novelties.

DELAY IS COMMISSIONERS' FAULT, SAYS M'GOVERN

OBSTRUCTION CHARGE BUNK, HE DECLARES

County Controller C. C. McGovern, Independent candidate for County Commissioner, speaking at noon today at the Independent headquarters in Fourth avenue, reiterated his charges that several bond issues intended for county improvements have been largely overdrawn, and denied that he was obstructing the completion of several projects, placing the responsibility for all delays on the County Commissioners.

His address follows in part:

The charge that I have obstructed public work for which there was money legally available is a deliberate, coldly-calculated distortion of fact intended to deceive citizens, and to turn attention from the county commissioners who are responsible for any delay in necessary public work.

I have only insisted that for every piece of county work contracted for there shall be available the money for payment without placing the county in debt to a point beyond which, under the law, we can go. The county commissioners do not know how much bonding power remains to them for improvements. That is why I demanded an audit of county funds, that we might learn exactly where we stood, and then proceed in a constructive, financially responsible manner, fair to taxpayers and contractors, on a program of public work.

This audit the Commissioners refused. They say they believe they are within their bonding power, but actually they do not know, and they admit they do not know.

There is not money available to pay debts on the Sixth Street Bridge, though payment was authorized by vote of the people through issuance and sale of bonds. A portion of these bonds never have been issued by the Commissioners, though they were under a plain mandate from the people to do so. Why? Simply because they wished to cause confusion, and attempt to deceive taxpayers into the thought that it was the Controller who was holding back work and payments. The Controller has nothing whatever to do with the bond issue for the Sixth Street Bridge, and I will not permit the Commissioners to put over such deception.

Work has been held up on one project because the Commissioners' bond fund, which they authorized themselves without a vote of the people, is overdrawn $700,000. Another is overdrawn $300,000. I want to know why these accounts are overdrawn, why expenses have so greatly exceeded anticipated or estimated expenses.

Scarred—Sues

CAROLE JANE PETERS

Whether a scar on the cheek of Miss Peters, bathing girl, is worth $35,000 will be decided by Judge J. L. Fleming. Miss Peters, known on the screen as Carole Lombard, has brought suit for that amount against Harry Cooper, 16, and his parents, John Cooper and Austiene G. Cooper. She alleges that she was injured while a guest in young Cooper's car, which collided with another machine in 1926. Miss Peters, 17, who is under contract to Mack Sennett, is suing through her guardian.

HARRIS OFFERS FIDDLERS

The saxaphone and the fiddle vie for honors in a novelty act offered by Charles Lines and his company of six players on the Harris stage this week. Three of the players, two of whom are Lines' aunt and uncle from Indiana, champion the old-fashioned fiddle and three perform in favor of modern jazz. Several song numbers of the old-time variety are introduced. The act is entertaining and won much applause at the opening performance yesterday. Girlie and Her Cyclones, five Negro performers, work hard and do some highly creditable stepping. O'Connor and Vaughn, feminine entertainers, sing and dance. Their dancing is all right. Cates and Hutton sing and chatter and get lots of laughs with their nonsense. Howard Nichols rolls his own—hoops, in this case. A strong man act completes the vaudeville program. The photoplay feature is "The Gingham Girl," a picturization of the musical comedy of the same name. It concerns a small town boy and a small town girl who go to New York and eventually, after getting into many laugh-provoking situations, make good. The girl is Lois Wilson and the boy, George K. Arthur. George is coming right up as a screen comedian. Short film features complete the bill.

Gridiron Film Stage Acts In Grand

Richard Barthelmess appears in a seasonable offering in the Grand this week, "The Drop Kick" fitting right into the October pigskin atmosphere. It is an interesting picture throughout, with the hero becoming so implicated by the wiles of a married vamp that he is on the verge of marrying her when her husband kills himself as a result of her extravagances. This affects his spirit and he is removed from the "big game" of his college after repeated fumbles. But, with three minutes to play, he goes back and wins the game with a drop kick that hits the bar—and dramatically bounds over. Meantime the vamp lady has been eliminated by the hero's clever mother. The football scenes are realistic in the extreme and the story has the merit of plausibility. Barbara Kent, Dorothy Revier, and Hedda Hopper are in the cast. On the stage is a novel presentation, "A Romance of the North Woods," Eddie Cook and Shaw sisters, in songs and dances. Other screen attractions and music complete the bill, the comedy being "Crazy to Fly," with Bobbie Vernon.

"TWO ARABIAN KNIGHTS" FILM IN CAMERAPHONE

"Two Arabian Knights," the post-war doughboy comedy that co-features William Boyd and Louis Wolheim, is being shown in the Cameraphone. This picture recounts, through many humorous situations, the adventures of a couple of American soldiers, who find themselves in a German prison camp and later in Arabia. Mary Astor is the heroine. Short features complete the bill.

What Is High Blood Pressure?

High blood pressure means that the blood stream and system have become loaded with body poisons. The heart strains, sometimes to the breaking point, to throw off its tremendous burden. Nature needs help—and a ten-day treatment of Lithuric Salts nearly always shows unusual benefit. Waste products of fermentation and decomposition are thoroughly but gently swept from the intestines, the liver is stimulated, the kidneys assisted and thus all organs of elimination are caused to function properly. The valuable, natural mineral salts and fruit acids of Lithuric Salts make a highly palatable, effervescent drink, and because it is the one salt compound which contains neither sodium chloride or sugar it is perfectly harmless to take. Ask any May Drug Co. store, or any other good druggist for a large, inexpensive bottle of Lithuric Salts today and try it. Satisfaction or your money back guaranteed.

Your Kidneys

LATE hours, rich foods and stimulating drinks are all hard on our kidneys. If their action becomes sluggish, they do not thoroughly cleanse the blood of poisonous wastes.

Such impurities are apt to make one dull, tired and achy, with often a nagging backache, drowsy headaches and dizziness. A common sign that the kidneys are not acting right is scanty or burning excretions.

MEDITATIONS of a MARRIED WOMAN

by HELEN ROWLAND

WHAT PRICE LOVE?

WHEN a famous comedienne sues for $250,000 for the alienation of her erring husband's "love," it makes you stop and think.

If a faithless husband's love is valued at a quarter of a million, what is a DEVOTED husband's love worth?

• • •

Don't count! It makes me dizzy! According to that estimate, most of us who possess non-skidding husbands should be rated in Bradstreet's as billionaires!

HELEN ROWLAND

Yet "honest, devoted love" is the kind that neither a man nor a woman seems to consider worth two cents—until it is lost, strayed or stolen and it's time to sue for alienation.

Devoted, steady, unwavering love—the kind that you don't have to work for, or worry over or struggle to keep—is a first-water gem of the rarest quality. Yet, nine times out of ten, it is treated as lightly and carelessly as a piece of glass jewelry from the ten-cent store.

It is not until a man sees the hem of love's skirt disappearing around the corner that he suddenly realizes what he is losing—and tries to snatch it back again.

It is not until a foolish woman has worn a patient love threadbare with her demands and caprices that she discovers that she has been using cloth of gold for a dish-rag—and vainly tries to patch it up again.

Many a man's shining and unselfish love has been used by a light and greedy woman as a means of extracting furs, diamonds and automobiles from him. Such love "comes so easy" that a stupid woman thinks it can't be worth much.

Many a woman's radiant devotion has been used by a thoughtless and selfish man merely as a sop to his vanity or a door-mat to be trodden all over until it is crushed out.

Yet, a woman will sob her heart out over the "lost love" of a man who never loved anybody on earth except himself. And a man will commit all sorts of folly for the love of a woman who never loved anything on earth but his pocketbook—and her looking-glass! And each of them will go into court and solemnly swear that such a "love" was worth a quarter of a million dollars.

A husband's love isn't worth a last year's almanac, unless it is ALL YOURS!

The love that you have to fight for isn't worth the price of a pair of boxing gloves. The love that has to be roped and tied isn't worth the cost of the rope!

• • •

Love is like a tooth or like your top-hair. Either you've got it, and it's PRICELESS—or you haven't got it, and it isn't worth a bad penny.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

Babies That Need Feeding by Bottle

ONE of the questions which comes up in every family where there is a tiny baby is the matter of feeding. Shall it be breast-fed exclusively, or bottle-fed exclusively? Or shall there be a mixture of the two?

DR COPELAND

Let it be understood that no greater blessing can come to an infant than to be breast-fed. Under no circumstances should the breast be discontinued unless there are unmistakable reasons for taking it away.

What are these reasons?

Of course the serious illness of the mother is an abundant reason. Suppose she is so unfortunate as to have Bright's disease, or tuberculosis? In that event it is absolutely necessary to stop feeding the baby by the breast.

It is probable that neither of these diseases would be discovered before the baby is born. It is to be hoped so, because breast-feeding must not be practiced in such a case.

It sometimes happens that a mother has never been able to bring up a baby on the breast. If this has happened with previously born babies, it will be better not to try it again. The bottle is likely to be better and safer.

Should the mother become pregnant before this baby has been weaned, it will be well to turn to the bottle. It is not fair to the mother, or to that other little soul on the way, to require the feeding of this infant.

There are other ailments which will make it necessary to resort to bottle-feeding. Anything which breaks down the mother's health or interferes with the making of good milk, is sufficient reason for taking away the breast.

All the things I have mentioned so far relate to the mother. Of course, there are symptoms suffered by the baby which lead to bottle feeding.

The surest test of an infant's welfare is its steady increase in weight. If this has been fairly satisfactory and then suddenly slows down, it raises the suspicion that something is wrong with the milk.

If there is no gain for some time, and particularly if there is a decrease in weight, you must give serious thought to the quantity and quality of the mother's milk. It will be necessary, in all probability, to give an occasional bottle, or to change to bottle-feeding exclusively.

Many a poor baby suffers from vomiting or diarrhea. It begins to waste away if the trouble isn't overcome. It is likely that the breast-feeding will have to be given up and the bottle substituted.

I am telling you these things for your information. Now I want to say that your baby is too precious for any kind of home doctoring. If the child fails to prosper, your doctor's advice is needed. He will decide the question of feeding for you.

Fay King Sees Mothers as Girls' Best Advisers

FAY-KING
GIRLS SEEM TO FORGET THAT MOTHER WAS ONCE AS YOUNG AND PRETTY AND POPULAR AS THEY ARE NOW
STYLES CHANGE. FADS ARRIVE AND FADE AWAY BUT THE REAL PROBLEMS OF LIFE REMAIN THE SAME.
WHY CONFIDE IN STRANGERS AS YOUNG AND FOOLISH AS YOURSELF WHEN A MOTHER'S UNDERSTANDING HEART IS HERE?

By FAY KING.

GIRLS forget that their mothers ever were young and pretty and popular and faced the same problems they are facing today!

They prefer to abide by the advice and standards of other young and foolish friends than to seek the advice and counsel of she who would be wisest and most understanding of all.

But things were so different in her time, they think. They were not.

Styles and fads may change, but life's real interests are always the same.

Girls had the same opportunities to make the same mistakes in mother's and grandmother's time as they have today.

The old hack was as convenient for petting parties as the modern taxi. The hacks were lined up in front of questionable restaurants that rented private dining rooms for gay drinking parties as the taxis are lined up today in front of questionable night clubs.

Girls became infatuated with rakish young men and ran away into lives of misery and regret, much as they make the same mistake today. Only it was not so widely printed in the papers.

Girls were found drowned and murders were committed for illicit love. A pretty girl in all times has attracted the wrong man as well as the right one and has had to choose.

Mother chooses rightly.

She married and made that little home of which her modern daughter is the most precious part, and she can tell her that she is not sorry.

The most modern Miss of today will be an "old-fashioned" mother of her daughter tomorrow. Will she be able to understand that daughter's problems?

Certainly! As able as her mother is today to understand hers!

Tomorrow's Horoscope

Wednesday, October 19

The Universe is either an inextricable confusion of combination and dispersion, or unity, order and providence.—MARCUS AURELIUS.

WHILE the general trend of business affairs may not be satisfactory, according to the negative force of the lunar aspects, yet a friendly Venus may bring benefits of a personal nature, especially in the social, domestic and affectional contacts, and may prosper those transactions having to do with feminine interests even in business.

It is admonished, however, that sufficient precaution be taken against false or fraudulent statements or negotiations, either verbally or in writing, Mercury being afflicted. Also do not run counter to law and order and make changes cautiously.

Those whose birthday it is may prepare for a year of activity in heart and home affairs, but in business or legal matters be on guard against false statements or trickery, either in writing or in oral representations.

A child born on this day may be talented and accomplished in social graces, but may require firm training to direct it into ways of truth and integrity. It may be vacillating and lean toward public life.

SPORT COMMENT

by JAMES J. LONG

WHEN the Pittsburgh baseball club drafted Pitcher James Lindsay from San Antonio, Tex., and Pitcher Charles Walsh from Lawrence, Mass., it boosted its team roster to the legal limit of 40 players.

No club in the majors is permitted to carry a greater number on its list at any time. From June 15 to August 31, each club must reduce to a total of not more than 25 athletes, but during the remainder of the year they are allowed to carry 40.

THE Pirate total is made up of five catchers, 18 pitchers, 10 infielders and seven outfielders, as follows:

Catchers—Smith, Gooch, Roy Spencer, Linton and Hemsley.

Pitchers—Kremer, Miljus, Hill, Meadows, Aldridge, Dawson, Cvengros, Yde, Peery, Morrison, Mahaffey, Tauscher, Fussell, Glenn Spencer, Brame, Bartholomew, Lindsay and Walsh. (Of these, Yde, Cvengros, Peery, Fussell and Bartholomew are left-handers).

Infielders—Traynor, Wright, Grantham, Harris, Cronin, Groh, Bartell, Windle and Gottlieber.

Outfielders—Paul Wayner, Lloyd Waner, Barnhart, Cuyler, Comorosky, Brickell and Layne.

HOWEVER, it is a certainty that the Pittsburgh club will not keep all of the above 40 men on its list for any great length of time.

Not only will Manager Donie Bush dispose of some of them in National League trades as soon as possible, thus putting some new names on the roster, but there will be a cutting down in other directions through the releasing of a few other players to minor league clubs.

This will be necessary for the reason that in purchasing Pitcher Fred Fussell and one or two of the other new men bought this fall, the Pirate management agreed to give, in addition to cash sums, several youngsters to whom it holds title.

THIS cannot be done immediately, because the period during which waivers may be asked, and which is closed at present, will not be reopened until October 25.

When the necessary waivers have been obtained after that date, several of the players whose names now grace the Corsairs' roster will be sent to minor league clubs in part payment for recruits purchased in recent months.

BASS TROUNCES BALLERINO

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 18.—Making his first appearance as featherweight champion, Benny Bass of this city punched his way to a well-earned victory over Mike Ballerino of Bayonne, N. J., former junior lightweight champion, in 10 furious rounds at the arena here last night.

Mike was always fighting back, however, and Bass had to keep going all the way to keep the dangerous Ballerino away.

Tunney - Dempsey Pictures Thrill Parisians

PARIS, Oct. 18.—(AP.)—Motion pictures of the Dempsey-Tunney fight have been shown in Paris for the first time before large audiences in which Dempsey sentiment seemed to predominate.

The spectators groaned, however, when Tunney was knocked down in the seventh round. Women shrieked and men cheered as they are accustomed to do at a regular prize fight.

"It is a good thing the battle was not fought in France, Tunney would have been counted out." Henri Bernstein, France's premier referee, declared.

Tunney's recovery and his outfighting of Dempsey in the eighth, ninth and tenth rounds brought cheers in recognition of Tunney's superb physical condition, uncanny footwork and boxing acumen.

'VARSITY QUITS AS COACH IS DEMOTED

LANCASTER, Pa., Oct. 18.—(UP.)—Franklin and Marshall College is without a football team today.

Indignant at the demotion of Head Coach D. K. Schroyer, to the position of coach of the freshman team, the entire varsity team walked off the practice field last night when announcement was made of Schroyer's let-down.

After a humiliating defeat at the hands of a weakened Ursinus team Saturday, the faculty committee for athletics removed Coach Schroyer from his position and promoted Charley Mayser, who had been Schroyer's assistant. Shober Barr, freshman team coach, was made assistant to the head coach.

Now the faculty committee faces a hard situation. The varsity men refuse to play under Mayser, or to return to the gridiron until Schroyer is reinstated.

Opinion on the campus today was that the faculty committee will reconsider its action and that the team will be back on the field tonight.

Single Second Saves Big Bet on Battle

Ten hundred and fifty dollars in a single wager hung in the balance at Motor Square Garden last night as Homer Robertson, Boston Negro middleweight, struggled to pull himself up at the count of nine in the ninth round of his bout with Maxie Rosenbloom of New York.

Slim Silverhart, local sporting figure, betting on his knowledge of Rosenbloom's reputed weak hitting power, put up $750 against $300 on Robertson to last the limit. As Homer sat on the canvas, feeling his split left eye, and seemingly unable to get up, it looked for all the world as if the short-end bettor would win the wager. However, Homer did get up and managed to stall out the round and then go on through the next and last session to save Silverhart's $750 and win $300 for him.

It was a close call.

Hub Wants Tris Speaker Signed As Brave Pilot

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—(UP.)—The names of Ty Cobb, Tris Speaker and Eddie Collins, three of baseball's greatest stars, have been linked with the Boston Braves through speculation over a manager for that team next season.

Davy Bancroft was given his release last week as manager and shortstop of the Braves to permit him to sign with the Brooklyn Robins.

"We have two or three men under consideration and expect to sign one of them this week," Judge Emil Fuchs, president of the Braves, said.

Cobb and Collins still are the property of the Philadelphia Athletics and Speaker belongs to Washington, and for the Braves to get any one of the trio waivers would be necessary.

However, it is doubtful if any American League club would be willing to meet the salary demands of any of them as a regular player.

Since Speaker played with the Red Sox during the height of their power, he is regarded as the leading possibility of the three men mentioned in the rumors.

Maxie Rosenbloom Beats Robertson

THROUGH the SPORT LENS

by HAVEY BOYLE

IT IS the opinion of Mr. Joseph Mays, who is such a veteran, that he remembers when this writer used to sit in a high-chair, that the breaks, and the breaks alone, determine the difference between the baseball clubs that play .500 baseball. He shrewdly observes that but for a turn in the luck here and there, St. Louis, New York, and even Chicago, might have beaten out the 1927 Pirates. He notes further in his letter that Chicago, New York or St. Louis might have given the Yankees far more trouble than did the Pirates.

HAVEY BOYLE.

Mr. Mays has followed baseball for a very long time, and helping his observation, is a mind attuned to logic and reasoning coming from the fact that he was a splendid checker player—and probably still is.

Another interesting thing about Mr. Mays was that he always held a cigaret in a fashion peculiar to himself. He formed a narrow U with thumb and forefinger and allowed the consoling smoke to rest on the shoulders of the said U.

In baseball he goes back easily to the days of Doggie Miller. It was not our privilege to know the well-known Doggie, but that he was quite a boy is attested to by the fact that rarely does a veteran reminisce but without referring in some way to Mr. Miller, of the strange nickname.

UNLESS Mr. Steffen at Carnegie Tech performs one of his well-known miracles, the Tartans are going to face a hopeless case this Saturday against one of the very best gridiron teams in Pitt football history. But no one is going to count out Tech completely this early. We all remember that last year the boys were betting something like 4 to 1 that Notre Dame would bring great grief to the Tartans, but what the Techites did in that game will live long in both Notre Dame and Tech.

The Techites hardly have an outside chance against Jock Sutherland's superb machine, but it is just on such occasions that the Carnegie boys pull something to astound all pessimists.

IT IS a pleasure for Pittsburghers to note the fine success the Panthers are enjoying. It is an especial pleasure to those who like the sound coaching methods and exemplary leadership of Jock Sutherland. The success so far and the success that seems to be in store for the Panthers brings a peace and quiet among the rooters that were missing last season when, although the season was not a drab one, the Panthers found themselves the victim of the gossips.

As we remember it now, there were cliques and cliches; fraternity feuds, and all that sort of thing, which were said to be responsible

KNOCKOUT ESCAPED BY HOMER IN NINTH

By HARRY KECK,
Sun-Telegraph Sports Editor.

MAXIE ROSENBLOOM of New York was just simply too good for Homer Robertson, Negro middleweight of Boston and formerly of Pittsburgh, in the 10-round windup at Motor Square Garden last night and easily romped off with the decision before a fair-sized crowd. A right to the head split Robertson's left eye open and floored him along the ropes for a count of nine late in the ninth round and it appeared for a moment as if Homer would not get up in time to beat the count. He finally made the grade and clinched and stalled his way through until the bell and in the last round was able to fight and hold alternately and keep out of danger.

Rosenbloom, with advantages of height, reach, weight and ring generalship in his favor, won every round, but it was anything but an uninteresting battle. Maxie is not much of a hitter. He slaps and cuffs too much with open gloves. He lathered Homer with plenty of punches, and a great variety of them, including numerous uppercuts, but did little harm aside from that inflicted by the one big wallop in the ninth round. Homer gamely kept trying to move inside and fight to the body, where he did his best work, but he was unable to do so without taking many punches en route and finding Rosenbloom willing to swap blows with him at close quarters. And Maxie proved entirely too shiftly to be scored against at long range.

ONE RALLY BY HOMER

Homer did not get into the running until about midway in the fifth round, when, while taking a two-handed cuffing, he suddenly came to life and scored solidly with a left hook to the head that shook Rosenbloom. He followed up this blow and drove Maxie before him with a succession of hard straight lefts, one of which caused Rosenbloom to waver in a neutral corner. Maxie, however, pulled himself together, and, by moving about, regained control of the situation.

The next three rounds were full of hard fighting, with Homer sticking manfully to his guns despite the superior generalship that enabled Maxie to dictate the fighting terms. Opening the ninth round, Rosenbloom began a vicious hammering attack to the body in the clinches. He brought down his right to the sides and kidneys with all his strength and Robertson began to show signs of wilting. Homer tried to break it up by mixing and in an

FLOWERS HAS EASY TIME WITH LOHMAN

CANTON, O., Oct. 18.—Tiger Flowers, former middleweight champion of the world, outpointed Joe Lohman of Toledo, in 10 rounds here last night. Lohman did his best work in the final round when he hurt Flowers during the early part of the round, but the Georgian came back in the last part to gain the edge.

Flowers took every round.

Flowers knocked down Lohman three times for the count of nine, but each time the Toledo lad got back to his feet and fought toe-to-toe with Tiger.

SOCKO HIMSELF IN PERSON

MOST POPULAR MEMBER OF PIRATES

And that's no kidding, either. His name is Caleb McCarey, but he's Socko to all the members of the Pirates, and he's the official clubhouse boy of the National League champions. Top picture shows him displaying some of the cash gifts he received from the players before they parted for their homes following the world series. He also was awarded a one-eighth share of the regular series spoils.

When Luque Lost, Mrs. Luque Lost Also

CINCINNATI, Oct. 18.—Mrs. Adolfo Luque was granted a divorce from her husband, the Cuban pitching star of the Cincinnati Reds, inside of 10 minutes yesterday.

Mrs. Luque told the court that when the Reds lost a baseball game she was afraid to go home because her husband let all of his pent-up wrath loose upon her.

Judge Charles Hoffman granted the decree on grounds of extreme cruelty and awarded her alimony of $2,500.

SOCKO MOST POPULAR MEMBER OF BUCS

By CHARLES J. DOYLE.

THERE seems to be an argument as to the identity of the most valuable player on the Pittsburgh baseball club, but there is no controversy as to the most popular member of the squad. No—you're wrong, it's not Pie Traynor, not Paul Waner, nor Sprout. It's none other than Socko, the clubhouse boy, who is presented above in two poses.

"Gunga Din" was supposed to be quite reliable on quick service in a clinch, but, take it from the Pirates, Gunga was a fresh traffic cop compared with Socko. If you ever heard Donie Bush, Earl Smith, Lee Meadows, Chauff Asten and a dozen others shouting at Socko for this and for that and all at the same time, then you have a faint idea of his job. And every member of the club thinks he has a license to punch Socko in the ribs as he passes him. But the Pirate booster always comes up smiling.

When the season is done there always is a fight for Socko's services. A dozen players want him to accompany them by auto. Socko returned home Saturday after escorting Emil Yde and Glenn Wright as far as Chicago. He returned just in time to set out for Indianapolis with Manager Bush.

Socko was voted an eighth share by the Pirates, but this was not all that came his way. One star pushed $100 in the pocket of the helpmate, while others kicked in with smaller amounts.

Caleb McCarey is the proper name of the willing worker, but you never would know it around the Pirate clubhouse.

CLEVELAND, Oct. 18.—The city of Cleveland stretched wide its arms to old Walter Johnson yesterday, beseeching that the "Big Train" be brought to the Windy City as manager of the Indians, the local American League entrants.

National Body Names Boxing Champions

TOLEDO, Oct. 18.—(UP.)—Joe Dundee, welterweight, and Sammy Mandell, lightweight, who have been in disfavor, today were recognized by the National Boxing Association here as the champions of their divisions.

The convention of boxing authorities in session also moved to clear up the muddle in the light-heavyweight division, due to the action of Jack Delaney in relinquishing his title, by naming Jimmy Slattery of New York as the new champion of that class.

Mickey Walker was recognized as the champion of the middleweights and Benny Bass of the featherweights and Bud Taylor of the bantams.

The title of the flyweights was declared open as a result of the retirement of Fidel LaBarba.

DONOHUE IS PRESIDENT

Thomas E. Donohue of Hartford, Conn., was elected president of the National Boxing Commission after the situation over the various champions had been straightened out. Donohue has been acting as president of the body.

The expected fight over the election failed to materialize when Paul Prehn of the Illinois Boxing Association agreed to accept the first vice-presidency.

Other officers chosen were:

Thomas Murphy, Canada; Stanley Isaacs, Cincinnati, and Tom Bigger, Michigan, vice presidents, and Latrobe Cogswell, Baltimore, secretary-treasurer to succeed himself.

MANDELL TO BOX TERRIS

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—(AP.)—A match that would bring Sammy Mandell, lightweight champion, against Sid Terris, New York contender, is in the making and will be closed if suitable financial arrangements can be made for Terris, according to Jess McMahon, matchmaker for Tex Rickard.

The fight would be 15 rounds to a decision at Madison Square Garden late in December or early January of 1928.

Eddie Kane, Mandell's manager, came to New York to secure a match for the champion, coincident with the meeting of the National Boxing Association at Toledo, where there was a prospect Mandell would be suspended unless he agreed to fight a boxer in the front rank within a reasonable length of time.

Kane said Mandell is anxious to meet Terris and that he has two other fights scheduled, one at Kansas City, November 18, and the other at Tulsa, Okla., November 24.

CHILLY SAUCE

By CHILLY DOYLE

ADMITTED by players and fans to be stars, the Waner brothers show a striking difference in their play. Perhaps the most outstanding conflict in the actions of the two little fellows is evidenced in their baserunning. Paul is not a good man on the paths, while Lloyd is one of the stars of the game. The older brother is fairly fast, but he does not run the sacks as smartly as does Brother Lloyd. The wee centerfielder seldom makes a mistake in his calculations while Paul is not so certain along these lines.

BOTH are exceptional judges of fly balls and both are surehanded. Paul, however, has the bulge in throwing power, yet Sprout is so swift and accurate in his work that he catches many a runner through these other assets. In figuring out possible plays that may come, Lloyd must again be handed the laurel. Paul has yet to be coached as to what to do under certain conditions. He will charge a ball and risk a lot as he did on Gehrig's short fly with two out and Ruth on base in the first inning of the first world series game. It would have been better had he moved to hold Ruth at third. Of course there was a chance that he could catch the ball, but under the conditions that held at the PASSES to the right of 'em, passes to the left of 'em, passes behind 'em—and they'll all be thrown by Berkman.

That's the prospect facing Duquesne University's Durable Dukes when they meet Thiel College in a Conference game on the Bluff gridiron Friday afternoon. Thiel, though they have yet to win a game, and were defeated by both Pitt and Tech and tied by Waynesburg, has a dangerous eleven, one that is built around the versatility of Stan Berkman and little Herb Mitchell. Berkman is the big threat of the team, for he runs, passes, kicks and plunges the line, and does all of those things well. His main forte, however, is passing, and he is just good enough that he kept Carnegie Tech worried all afternoon a few weeks ago with his accurate heavies.

Duquesne, with one victory, two defeats and a tie will be primed to stop Berkman and with him, the entire Thiel eleven. Coaches Layden and Weibel weren't overjoyed with the draw they got at Bethany, for they deserved a win and were counting on as much.

It seems the Duquesne passing attack fell down with a solid "plunk," only one pass being completed, and that for a touchdown. If the Dukes take to the air to any extent Friday and Thiel continues to hurl the ball on most every play, you'll see some exciting football, no mistake.

This game was originally scheduled for Friday, then was moved back to Saturday when the Dukes announced their intention of playing all their games the same day Pitt and Tech played, and later, again set for Friday, to accommodate Thiel. In as much as the decision to play on Saturday was made after the schedule had been drawn up and most games carded for Friday, the Dukes may have to bow to the wills of other opponents aside from Thiel. Next year, though, John Holahan says he'll play all his games Saturday.

While Duquesne and Thiel are battling on the Bluff, Pittsburgh's other college varsities will be hiding away in the country, in preparation for the game for the city championship Saturday. Pitt's Golden Panthers are certain to be taken out of town over Friday before they are hurled against Tech, and as the Tartans went away for the W. & J. game, they will very likely hide out for this, a far more important game.

ENN GRIDDERS BLUE AFTER STUNNING LOSS

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 18.—Blue Monday well describes Penn's football drill yesterday. Still stunned by the 20-0 drubbing administered by Penn State Saturday it was learned today that Martin Brill, speedy halfback and Johnny Utz, first string left guard will not be able to face Chicago in the Windy City on Saturday.

Friday School Game Shifted To Thursday

Most of the local scholastic football games carded for Friday will be played on Thursday, it was learned this morning. The Teachers' Institute meets on Friday and that is the cause for the setting back of the date.

The feature game of the week-end, between Westinghouse and Peabody, on the East Enders' grounds, will be contested on Thursday for a certainty, according to Faculty Manager Harrison.

Other City League games which likely will be played on Thursday, scheduled for Friday, are between Langley and Carrick, at Carrick, and Schenley and Fifth Avenue, at Fifth Avenue.

The Perry-and-Allegheny game date has been given an even more radical going over. It was slated for Friday—but will be played tomorrow on the Oliver High School gridiron. This was made necessary due to the fact that Perry has no grid of its own, and Oliver has had to move its contest from Friday to Thursday. A muddy prospect seems to be awaiting the Perry-Allegheny machines.

This cabinet receiver, because of its extreme selectivity, is ideally adapted for use in the congested broadcasting areas.

Each instrument (with the self-contained RCA Loudspeaker) has been hand-built and individually tested.

Ship Models That Have Just Made the Crossing From Europe

The LIFE AND LETTERS OF WOODROW WILSON

Elected to Princeton University, Wilson Removes There

How and Why Wilson Was Chosen in a Time of Shifting Tendencies, in the Development of Which He Had a Large Part

The incessant labors of Woodrow Wilson while teaching at Wesleyan University were described yesterday in the Sun-Telegraph. His lecturing, writing and studying were part of his preparation for the great part he was later to play in educational and national affairs. Politics and public law were his passions. Harrison's election and his cabinet selections disappointed him. Bryce's "American Commonwealth" and the "Parnell Letters" interested him. He found relaxation in the theater and professional baseball games.

By RAY STANNARD BAKER

Copyright, 1927, by Doubleday, Page & Co.

Wilson Goes to Princeton

WILSON had a brilliant record at Bryn Mawr and Wesleyan, he had written two notable books; he had contributed striking essays to the most distinguished literary and academic journals of the time; he was beginning to make an unusual reputation as a lecturer, both in college and out; but it was the devotion of friends of the faithful class of '79, Robert Bridges chiefly, which secured him his opportunity at Princeton.

One of the extraordinary aspects of Wilson's life was his friendships. He had the ability of making a powerful impression upon many of the ablest men he met and of binding them to him with a lasting devotion. There were always friends at hand willing to work for him, push him forward. No man was ever more dependent upon his friends, both men and women, for sympathy and support than Woodrow Wilson. He wanted love, but must do his own thinking. All his life he was trying to keep his emotions apart from his thoughts; his friendships apart from his convictions. He would love without reservations; he must think coldly. Few men can do that or understand it in others; much tragedy is likely to flow from the attempt.

He was absolutely clear as to whither he was bound, what he wanted to do. He was always sure of ultimate objectives. And he could wait, even hold back, somehow knowing, Deo volente,—or "D. V." as he usually wrote it—that a way would open for him.

There was at the moment a possible position at Princeton to succeed Prof. Sloane, then being talked about for president. Wilson leaned heavily upon his friend, asked him "how to set about instituting a candidacy." He was doubtful about himself, feared his own initiative.

Princeton Plans

Bridges kept quietly at work in Wilson's behalf, enlisted the interest of Dean Murray, and finally, on July 22, 1889, he arranged a luncheon with Dr. Patton, the new president of Princeton, in New York. We have a full account of it written the next day to Bridges:

"106 High St., Middletown, Conn.
"23 July, '89.

"Dear Bobby:

"I was sorely tempted to let my 5 o'clock train go without me yesterday afternoon and stay over to tell you about the interview. There's much to tell—but, fortunately, it may be summed up with some brevity. Our conversation after you left became immediately pertinent in the most natural possible manner by my telling him, in answer to his questions as to the nature of the textbook whose proofs were calling me home, just my views as to the field of that book, the field of my own special studies. We went on easily into talk about Princeton plans, and the net result (a result to which I was able to make a considerable contribution out of my own views) was this: His plan is to replace Johnston with a specialist in political economy; that done, he will be ready to add within a year (by means of the income from 'Brown Hall,' the dormitory immediately to be erected) a professorship of 'Public Law,' to include the history and philosophy of laws and institutions (the subjects of which I most wish to become and remain a master). These three departments (Sloane's and the two I have mentioned) will complete, at any rate for the present, the 'School of Political Science,' upon which Patton will seek to build at as early a time as possible a liberal and in every way worthy 'School of Law.'

"As for myself, a tentative idea of his had been that I should at once fill Johnston's place, until, next year being tided over, a specialist in Political Economy could be secured, and I put into the new chair of 'Public Law.' This I discouraged because (1) of my obligations to the people here, who have been much too generous to me to be left in the lurch for next year; (2) of my engagements for a portion of next year at the Johns Hopkins, and (3) of my disinclination to teach political economy. I have every reason to believe, however, that I am his choice for the chair of Public Law—and he every reason to believe that I would accept it. It will be the very sort of chair I've been waiting for.

Moments of Doubt

"That is the gist of a whole conversation, almost two hours long, in which he made me feel perfectly at ease and in which, consequently, we were able to get well acquainted with each other's minds. Your good will and generous good offices seemed to preside over the whole interview. I feel that I now have still another proof of a friendship such as seems, in point of vigilance and soundness, to have been reserved for your creation.

"I reached home in status quo, have read 50 pages or more of proof, and am now settling down to be lazy—luxurianting in the recollection of a most enjoyable visit.

"I knew that you would want to know about the interview as soon as possible.

"Mrs. W. joins me in warmest regards. As ever,

"Your affectionately,
"WOODROW WILSON."

"Mr. R. Bridges."

Afterward he went through a period of hesitation and doubt quite characteristic of him.

"I never feel sure of a thing—so suspicious am I of good fortune—till I get it actually within my grasp," he wrote to Bridges.

He worried not a little because he heard no word from Princeton—Patton was notoriously dilatory—and indeed there was actually some opposition among the trustees:

"The items urged against me are certainly astonishing. I think the one that strikes me nearest to the line between wind and water is that which ascribes to me a learning and depth incompatible with ability to interest the boys. Would I were learned! It must surely be the influence of that unfortunate after-dinenr prose of mine at the alumni dinenr."

Patton, it appeared, was absolutely committed to Wilson from the first. A two-hour conversation with Wilson was quite likely then, as afterward, to commit any one to him! Patton had bought "Congressional Government" and read it. A "sound book," he called it. When one of the oldest and most influential trustees, Judge Caleb Green, argued against Wilson, "He's a Southerner and will make trouble," Patton sent him Wilson's book. Next day when Patton called, Green remarked somewhat grudgingly: "The book is not without merit," but he was still suspicious of the Southerner. Nevertheless, he made no further objections and Bridges steadily continued his pressure.

Election to Princeton

"MIDDLETOWN, Conn.,
"27 January, 1890.

'My Dear Bobby,

". . . You are the most extraordinary proxy I ever heard of; you act and converse for me better than I can act and talk for myself. The contents of your letter has greatly reassured me. To have a friend like you—and, in this instance, like Ed Sheldon—might almost tempt a fellow to do nothing for himself. I am honestly at a loss to understand how I ever won such esteem and friendship—but I am none the less grateful on that account. . . .

"You need not be uneasy on the score of your assurances that I would gladly accept an appointment at Princeton. That is still strictly true, notwithstanding the new opportunities here. Though this is in truth a delightful place to work, it is not a sufficiently stimulating place—largely because the class of students here is very inferior in point of preparatory culture—comes from a parentage for the most part, of narrow circumstances and of correspondingly narrow thought. The New England men among them, besides, have an added New England narrowness in political study."

He was formally elected not long afterward, although in the meantime he was approached with an offer to join the faculty of Williams College and Wesleyan tempted him to remain with the promise of the establishment of a new chair for him.

But Princeton was irresistible. Ever since he had determined upon an educational career, it had glimmered in his mind as an ultimate goal. He had been happy there as a student; he was overjoyed to return as a professor. He was to serve in the faculty for 12 years and eight as president—more than a quarter century of his life (including his residence in the town while Governor of New Jersey) he spent at Princeton. Beyond any other place it was his home.

On Eve of New Era

Wilson moved with his family to Princeton in September, 1890. Quite a different appearance it was from the day 15 years before when the shy student walked up the village street with all his worldly possessions in his father's ministerial black bag, knowing nobody and afraid to present his letter of introduction to Dr. McCosh. He had now a reputation in the academic world; a distinguished reputation for a man so young, and—if that were not enough!—he had helped coach a winning football team. We get a glimpse of Mrs. Wilson "looking surprisingly young and utterly charming" and of the three little girls—Margaret, four; Jessie, three, and Eleanor, a little more than one.

Princeton was a country village and the life was simple and democratic. Greek letter fraternities were sternly banned and interest in the old-fashioned forensics of Whig and Clio Halls, while somewhat subdued since Wilson's student period, was still substantial. And the religious spirit of the Presbyterian tradition was vital.

But there were evidences of the awakening that was to come: An awakening in which Wilson himself, all unknown to him then, was to play so large a part. The venerable Dr. McCosh, who had been a power in the earlier days, had retired from the presidency two years before, but was still giving lectures in philosophy. He and Mrs. McCosh were literally worshiped by the entire community. Dr. Francis L. Patton had come in as president. He was a brilliant and magnetic preacher and a witty companion, though a woefully inefficient administrator, and he was even more conservative in his views than the robust-minded Dr. McCosh.

Born in the British island of Bermuda, he had been all his life a Presbyterian minister, a professor in two theological seminaries, a teacher of ethics. He came in at a time when the tendency in American education was setting strongly away from theological and classical leadership toward a new concern with modern history, science, politics, economics and sociology. Ministers were everywhere giving place to laymen in college presidencies. Wilson himself, 12 years later, was to be the first president of Princeton who was not a clergyman.

Change Under Way

Patton recognized the drift, if he did not wholly sympathize with it, and was planning various new departures at Princeton—a "specialist in political economy," "a professorship of public law"—plans which would conciliate the new without really disturbing the old. He wanted "new blood," but it must be "safe."

He chose Wilson because he was not only young and brilliant, but gifted with a mastery of language, a distinction of manner, a strong sense of the value of tradition. But he did not know the impassioned spirit of the man he was choosing, the deadly sincerity of purpose. A curious parallel exists between Wilson's election as a professor at Princeton and his choice years later by the old bosses as a political leader in New Jersey.

Such was the situation as we can see it clearly in the after look of history. The little group of men there in the Princeton of 1890 saw it not at all or only dimly. Each was earnestly and blindly working out his destiny in his own way, trying as men do to make over his little world to conform to his vision. Out of such activities presently there were to grow up parties and leaders of parties, and conflicts between variant points of view, and mayhap a little groping progress in the long business of life. The seeds that flowered in the controversies at Princeton from 1907 to 1910 were all in the ground in 1890. It was a contest, moreover, that was as widespread as the interest in education; in one form or another it was being fought out in many colleges; but it was to be more vital and significant at Princeton than elsewhere, because there was in the new professor of jurisprudence a quality of genius, a gift of leadership, a power of vivid expression beyond that of any other American college man of his time.

Wilson as the teacher will be pictured tomorrow in a further narrative of Princeton days. Also it will be related how he helped coach the football team.

DISSENSION BREAKS OUT, HALTS DAWN FLIGHT

By International News Service.

OLD ORCHARD BEACH, Me., Oct. 18.—Adverse winds along the shore, coupled with a disagreement over the question of the lifting power of the transatlantic plane The Dawn, caused Mrs. Frances Wilson Grayson today again to postpone the take-off for Copenhagen, Denmark.

The Dawn may hop at low tide, between 11 and 12 o'clock tomorrow forenoon, she said.

In the take-off yesterday The Dawn was down by the nose because of an unequalized load and had to return. Mrs. Grayson today was insisting on another load test, with Navigator Brice Goldsborough objecting on the ground of unnecessary delay.

Pilot Wilmer L. Stultz, who will guide the ship, was noncommittal, only insisting apparently that he have a south, southeast or southwest wind for the take-off.

The disagreement between Mrs. Grayson and her navigator broke out in a local hotel while they were studying weather reports from steamships at sea.

"I'm going to make this trip regardless of what happens," said Mrs. Grayson, it was learned. "I've worked more than a month on this flight and I'm going through with it in every detail."

The crew of the Sikorsky Airplane Company worked all night in equalizing the load. All was ready for a take-off today.

Weather reports today, although showing a strong northeast wind on the coast, noted clear weather over the Atlantic with visibility the best in some days.

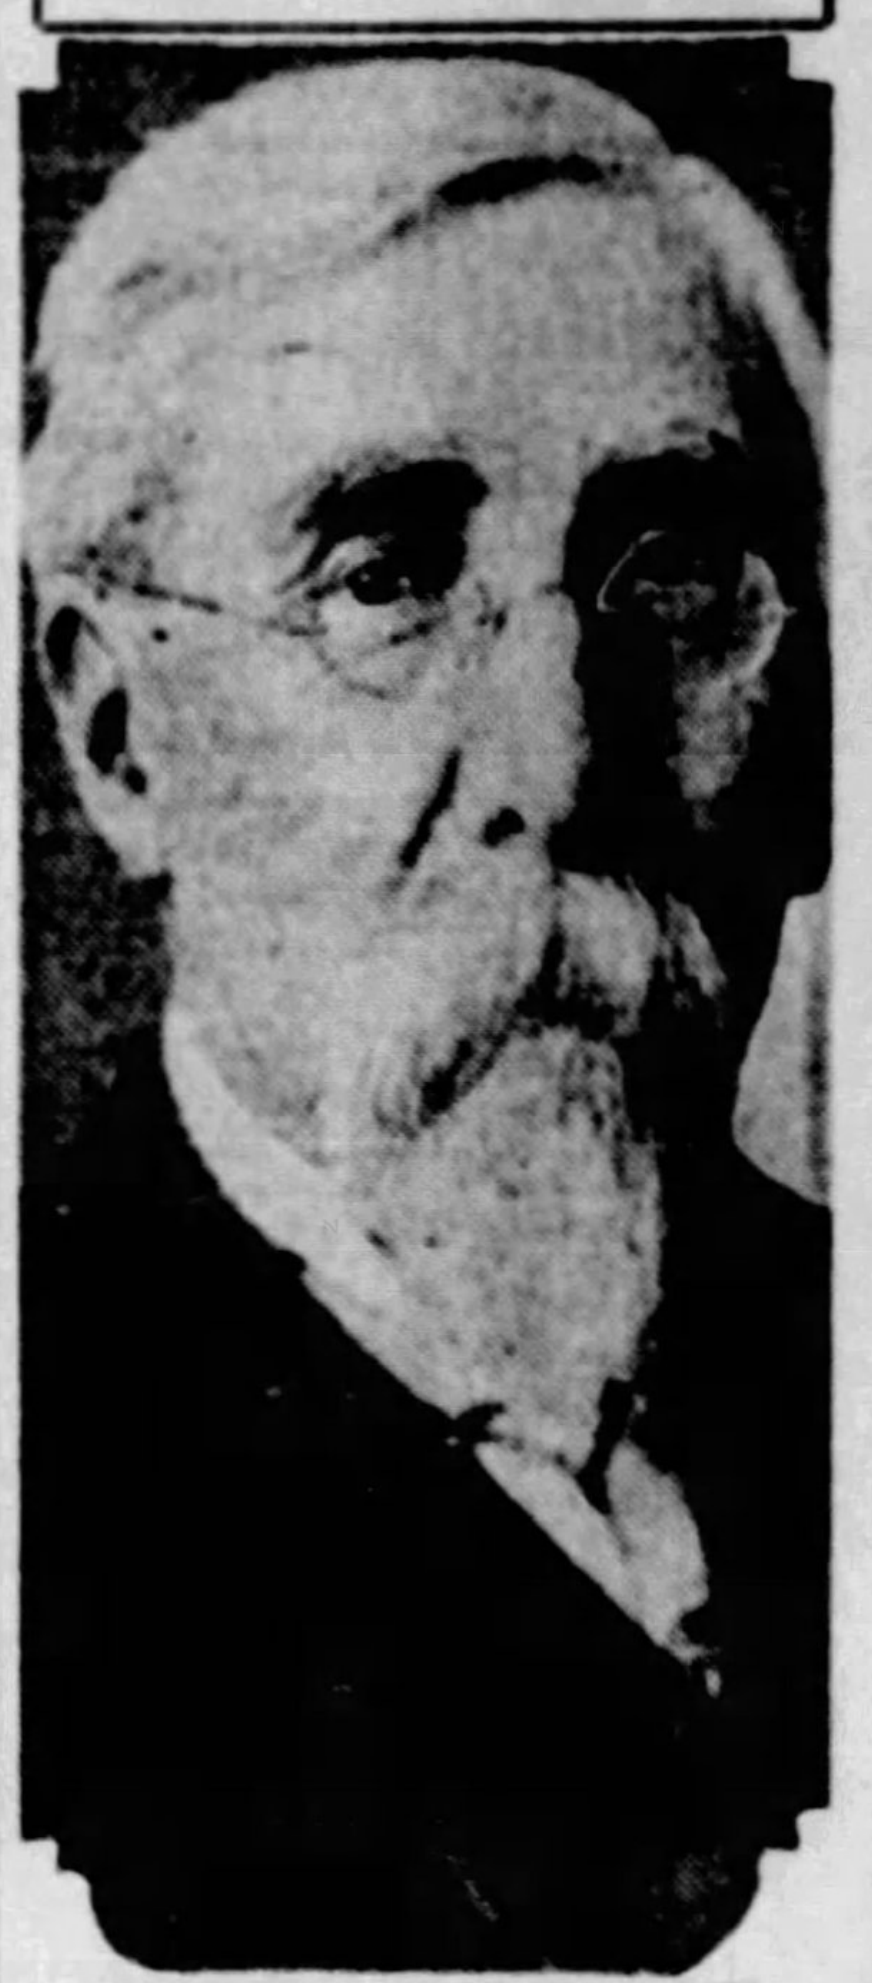
HOW 5TH AVENUE SHOULD LOOK IS DESCRIBED

Members of Pittsburgh's Fifth Avenue Association last night were told how the removal of street signs and other unsightly objects had enhanced property values and increased business in New York. Capt. William J. Pedrick, vice president of the Fifth Avenue Association of New York City, which has labored for years to beautify the business section of the metropolis, asserted that the big electric signs that appear in Fifth avenue, this city, are an eyesore and a disgrace to Pittsburgh. He answered many queries regarding the methods used to obtain the results he described as having done wonders in securing architectural harmony and greater comfort for shoppers in several streets in New York.

Richard K. Mellon, president of the local association, introduced James Frances Burke as toastmaster at a dinner held in the William Penn Hotel for the purpose of furthering the efforts of the body in improving conditions in Fifth avenue. Lantern slides showing signless streets in several other cities were shown by Clarence R. Nesbit, secretary of the association.

Sues Fords



HENRY M. LELAND

Suit against Henry and Edsel Ford by stockholders of the original Lincoln Motor Company to compel the Fords to pay the losses to stockholders of the company is in course of preparation. The preparation of the legal action which would involve millions of dollars, became known when William Henry Gallagher was retained to conduct the suit by Henry M. Leland and Wilfred Leland, original organizers of the Lincoln Motor Company. The Lelands claim that the Fords had promised to reimburse the stockholders for any loss that might occur when the company was taken over by the Fords. Henry M. Leland was one of the pioneers of the automobile industry. He left the presidency of the Cadillac Motor Company to organize the Lincoln Company. Leland was also one of the associates of Henry Ford when the latter's first car was manufactured in 1901.

Millie Gets New Sweetie, A Coffee Planter From Argentine, She Says

"MILLIE is having a beautiful time with her young South American," read Sally, after this interruption, "He is quite frantic about her, and really it is just like a wonderful love story to hear her tell about him—all the things he says to her, and the way he looks at her. The poor child needs some new clothes, for he has seen almost everything she has in the way of hats and dresses. She is so blue because she has nothing pretty and fresh to wear. So send some money without fail.

"Love, from Mother."

"Too bad about Millie and her clothes!" remarked Aunt Emily. "I'll bet she has five dresses to your one! And I'll send no money down to Bermuda to doll her up in a lot of clothes for some greasy South American to look at! Not while my name's Emily Ann Jerome. Read the other letter, Sally."

Sally tore open Millie's envelope and unfolded the sheet of pale pink perfumed paper within.

Millie did not know how to spell, and her handwriting was like a child's handwriting—large and sprawling and hard to read.

"Sally, darlingest," she began, affectionately, "do you want to do the very sweetest thing possible for your own little sister? Because if you do, I shall never be through thanking you. I want some money for some new clothes. You see, honey love, all of my own things look so faded and old down here in the sunshine. I have a new sweetie—a coffee planter from Buenos Aires—and I want to make a ten-strike with him. But how can I, without a lot of new things? Just for the fun of it I told him we were quite rich, and how can I live up to that unless I have some new pretties and plenty of them? So please send me every nickel you can scrape together right away. I should have written you weeks ago, but, dear, I've been so busy looking after poor Daddy-boy.

"Best love always, from Millie."

"They're a fine pair!" sniffed Aunt Em when Sally had laid both letters down beside her plate. "Never written you a line until they needed some money! That's just exactly like them, though! Just what you'd expect from them!" She got up and carried her empty coffee cup and toast plate into the kitchen.

"I wash my hands of them!" she tossed back angrily, over her shoulders. "And if YOU send them money, you ARE goofy!"

But Sally did. She had about $40 laid away in her handkerchief box upstairs, and she took it with her when she and Aunt Em set out for down town that afternoon.

They had left Hilda in charge of the house, with orders to tell everybody who came that The House by the Side of the Road was closed—and closed for good and forever.

Aunt Em stopped the car at the gate for a few minutes while she ripped down the swinging wooden sign that hung above the gateposts. She threw it into the road and climbed back into the car.

"Where are we going?" asked Sally, as they rolled along in the warm wind.

"Down town," answered Aunt Em.

"Yes, I know that. But where are we going when we reach down town?"

"You'll see," Aunt Em said mysteriously. "You'll see, girl."

Sally wondered how she could lose her aunt for a few minutes while she went to a telegraph office and sent the $40 down to Millie in Bermuda . . . Forty dollars was little enough to send, but it was all she had, and it was plenty to buy Millie a simple little silk sports dress and one of the large floppy pink hats that were her favorite headgear.

"I have a little business to attend to," she said. "While you're parking the car, I'll slip away and do it, Aunt Em. Where shall I meet you?"

Aunt Em's clever face sharpened. "You're going to send those worthless people your hard-earned money, aren't you?" she asked, and Sally's flush was all the answer she needed. "But go ahead and do it if you want to. It's nothing to me what you do with your own money. Only you're a fool!"

She stood outside the telegraph office while Sally went inside and sent Millie the money.

"I could just shake you!" was all she said when Sally came out and they started along the crowded pavement toward Thirteenth street.

"Oh, well, Mother said she needed some money, too," the girl replied, soothingly, "and I wired Millie to give her part of the little bit of money I sent."

"You don't think for a minute that Millie will, though, do you?" Aunt Em exploded. "No, sir-ee! She'll spend every red cent on her own silly back. I wish she would marry her South American and leave the rest of us in peace. Here's what I wanted to show you this afternoon."

She shoved Sally through the crowd to the front of an antique store, halfway down Thirteenth street. The windows were filled with hooked rugs, mahogany chairs the color of old claret, royal blue Worcestershire china, Tobey jugs and vases of Bristol glass.

"Now, look at that!" cried Aunt Em in a low but excited voice. "There's not a thing in that window as nice as some of the things we've got in our own house! Do you see?"

Lately she had taken to calling the old house where she had always lived "our" house. It was as if she had adopted Sally for her own child.

"I thought we could turn our house into an antique shop!" Aunt Em went on, two bright spots of color in her thin face. "I'm sick of the restaurant business, anyway. Even before last night's disgraceful business I'd made up my mind to end it pretty soon. . . . We could make a fortune selling antiques, Sally. First, we'd get rid of our own old things, and then we'd lay in more stuff. We could go all through New England and buy up old things for a song." Her voice clattered on, full of enthusiasm and eagerness.

"That will be fine," said Sally, trying to feel eager and excited, too.

But, somehow, her heart was not in the new plan. It struck her as being a dull sort of future to look forward to—selling glass and mahogany to people.

That night, lying in bed with her eyes on the stars outside her open windows, she tried to think of some other kind of work that might appeal to her more.

She fell asleep without succeeding. She had lost, for a time, the thing she called her "pep."

The next morning, before 10 o'clock, Mabel was at the house. She came driving up in Beau's little red car, and she had the baby rolled up on the seat beside her.

Sally saw her coming, from the breakfast room window, where she sat polishing some old Sheffield silver that Aunt Em had made up her mind to sell.

She laid down her polishing cloth and hurried to the front door.

"Why, Mabsy dear, what's wrong?" she asked, for Mabel's eyes were pink and swollen from crying, and she breathed unevenly. "What's happened?"

"Plenty!" said Mabel. "Plenty!"

CHAPTER LXIV.

"YOU see that car?" asked Mabel, pointing dramatically at Beau's little red car standing in the driveway.

"Yes. What about it?" asked Sally, taking the baby from her and carrying it into the dining room, where a small fire sent its warmth into the chilly air of the old house.

"Well, Beau thinks it's stolen—that's what!" Mabel sniveled. "He took it out last night, and I found it where he had left it in the street and drove it to a garage near our flat." She wopsed down in a chair and began to wipe her eyes and the end of her small pink nose.

Aunt Em suddenly appeared in the doorway.

"What's wrong?" she asked, scenting bad news with her unfailing instinct for it.

Sally, always doing her best to protect Beau, tried to motion to Mabel to be still about him. But Mabel either did not see her, or did not want to see her, for she went on:

"Everything's all wrong, Auntie Em. Beau's been kiting around with some girl, and last night I followed him to her house. His car was standing out in the street in front of it, and I took it. This morning he left the flat without telling me that his car had been 'stolen,' and I wrapped up the baby and came here to you and Sally. I'm going to stay with you from now on. Sally can go back to the flat for my things. They're all packed."

Aunt Em's face began to look like a thunderstorm, a battlefield, and a cyclone all in one. "Oh, no, you're not going to stay here, my lady!" said Aunt Em with firmness and conviction. "You're going right back where you came from—and I'm going to tell you why you're going."

She pulled out a chair, and sat down upon the very edge of it. "Remember, before I begin, that I know more about the men in the Jerome family than you do!" she started off. "I've lived with them all my life, and most of them have been just like Beau—weak and lazy and shiftless. They need managing. Now, do you want me to tell you how to manage Beau?"

Mabel was silent. Her little face was sullen, and she kicked her heels against the beautiful old chair in which she was sitting.

"Well, I'll tell you whether you want to hear it or not," Aunt Em said brightly. "The trouble with you, Mabel, is that you started all wrong in your married life. You never should have worked a day in an office after you became Beau's wife. You should have become a clinging vine—a very clinging vine. You should have thrown all the responsibility on Beau. You should have given him a real job—a job of taking care of you. Then he wouldn't have had time to run after other women, and he wouldn't have had any money to spend on them."

"No," agreed Mabel, coming out of her sulk.

"Well, then, you'd better go back home and start to be a clinging vine right away," advised Aunt Em with a quick nod of her head. "You'd better quit your job today, and spend the whole day making your flat clean and comfortable, and washing your head and painting up your face. Land knows I don't believe in paint for most folks, but you need it today, Mabel."

Mabel did. Her little face was pale-gray from loss of sleep and long hours of crying. Her mouth was a perfect picture of the reason husbands leave home.

The Bearded Giant Delivers a Message to Miss Lincoln

FOR a startled second it seemed to me that the red-haired and red-bearded giants who had so suddenly appeared in front of our little group upon the veranda of The Larches must have arisen like a huge genie from the ground. Then I realized that he must have come in from the road by way of the grove of larches from which the old place takes its name, and have stepped out suddenly from behind the trees immediately sheltering the house.

That there was something queer, almost sinister about this sudden appearance was a conviction which came forcibly to me, as I thus saw for the second time the man whom I suspected of masquerading as a foreigner ignorant of our language. If he were, as he pretended, simply staying at the Grimsey shack near our farm, for his health and fishing, why should he be here at the doorway of this always carefully guarded and secluded place?

Suddenly I felt a little premonitory sense of something tense, electric in the atmosphere. The man had halted when he saw us, patently not expecting to deal with a group of people. His eyelids, because of some queer affliction of his eyes only half open, were quivering violently, and I saw that from beneath them he was gazing warily at us.

Noel and Mary were plainly unaffected by his appearance, but patently curious. Miss Lincoln had drawn herself up with the natural arrogance of her type of woman at any unusual intrusion. But Dicky—I stared at him in astonishment. He was standing stiffly in a dazed fashion as if something had struck him in the face, looking at the red-haired man with a scrutiny which had something threatening in it.

That the read-haired man saw my husband's curious behavior and was uneasy concerning it I saw plainly. He turned quickly as if the scuttle off, when Miss Lincoln's clear imperious voice halted him.

"What are you doing here?" she asked. "Don't you know this is private property?"

He shook his head and spread his hands to show his ignorance of the tongue she was using.

"Try him in French, speaking slow," I whispered. "He was at our house yesterday." But before she could speak, the man forestalled her.

"You Mees Lincoln?" he asked fawningly.

I saw a startled look come into her eyes. I had seen the same thing in the eyes of a trapped animal. But she held her head high, and answered him without a tremor.

"That is my name."

"I haf message." He spoke slowly, almost solemnly and held out a dirty brown envelope, sealed. But with unflinching eyes she looked at him scathingly.

"Do not dare to come nearer," she said. "Lay the envelope on the sundial. Then go."

The last word was like an explosion. With it she seemed to lose the last of her agitation. It was with the air of an experienced drawing-room hostess that she turned to us.

"I think I hear Mrs. Ticer on the veranda," she said. "I am sure she has tea ready. Suppose we take it now, and explore the grounds afterward."

We retraced our steps to the front veranda, but when we had reached there and settled ourselves around the tea-table, we found that Dicky had not returned with us.

Pyorrhea Sufferers Hail New Treatment

Pyorrhea is an infection between the teeth and gums. This infection loosens the teeth. Gradually your teeth will fall out if you don't do something for it—and do it quick!

You may brush your teeth faithfully every day. But this won't stop pyorrhea. It won't keep your gums from bleeding and your teeth from loosening. Use a mouth antiseptic powerful enough to destroy the pyorrhea infection—GERM-ORAL.

All the pyorrhea germs, all the infection, all decay in your mouth, are destroyed by GERM-ORAL. It quickly ends the dreaded pyorrhea for good. Thousands of men and women who despaired of ever getting rid of this terrible trouble, write us letters of the many wonders GERM-ORAL has done. One man writes: "Though my wife's teeth are all sound, I am afraid she will lose them, on account of her diseased gums. She has trench gums. Send me a bottle of GERM-ORAL." Six weeks later he writes: "My wife's gums absolutely well, although the dentists said they were beyond relief. Germ-oral is the best ever for pyorrhea and sore, bleeding and pussy gums."

Best Way to Loosen Stubborn Cough

This home-made remedy is a wonder for quick results. Easily and cheaply made.

Here is a home-made syrup which millions of people have found to be the most dependable means of breaking up stubborn coughs. It is cheap and simple, but very prompt in action. Under its healing, soothing influence, chest soreness goes, phlegm loosens, breathing becomes easier, tickling in throat stops and you get a good night's restful sleep. The usual throat and chest colds are conquered by it in 24 hours or less. Nothing better for bronchitis, hoarseness, throat tickle, bronchial asthma, or winter coughs.

To make this splendid cough syrup, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup and shake thoroughly. If you prefer, use clarified honey, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, you get a full pint—a family supply—of much better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for three times the money. Keeps perfectly and children love it.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract and palatable guaiacol, known the world over for its prompt healing effect upon the membranes.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

Try Losing 20 Lbs.

Learn what it means to be slender. What it means in new beauty, new health and vitality. You will always be glad that you know.

Wherever you look you can see that people have found a new way to reduce. Excess fat, once so common, is the exception now. Find out that scientific method in justice to yourself.

That way is embodied in Marmola prescription tablets. People have used them for 20 years—millions of boxes of them. The slender figures which prevail today are largely due to that.

The use of Marmola requires no abnormal exercise or diet, though moderation helps. Simply take four tablets daily until the excess disappears. Every box contains the formula and the reasons for results, so you will have no fear of harm. The effects are due to a substance which Nature employs in the body to turn food into fuel and energy rather than into fat. It is the result of wide research and experiment by scientific men.

If you overweigh, you owe yourself a trial of the help that has done so much. Take Marmola for a while and watch the change that comes. All the results will delight you, we believe. Order now, before you forget it. When reduction is so easy, why stay fat?

Marmola prescription tablets are sold by all druggists at $1 per box. If your druggist is out, he will get them at once from his jobber.

The Woman Pays But Does Not Mind It Now.

For years women have been buying vanishing creams, always hoping and looking forward to finding a cream that would not harm or dry up the skin and clog the pores, a cream that could be used as a powder base without leaving that usual scaly appearance.

And now, after years of patient and scientific research work by an expert chemist, there has been produced a vanishing cream in liquid form, known as Mibalm Liquid Vanishing Cream. A cream that is so different from the solid creams and unlike all liquid creams.

It is healing, soothing and mildly astringent, contains no oils, fat or grease, is snowflake-like in texture, and unequaled as a powder base. One application leaves the skin soft and pearl-like in appearance.

MIBALM LIQUID VANISHING CREAM is snow-white, it is made by the makers of MIBALM, you can buy it at all the leading Drug and Department Stores, you can always get it at May's.

LUNCHEON PARTY LAUDS PLAN OF MRS. HEARST

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—In honor of her work toward the establishment of a detention house for women in New York City, a testimonial luncheon for Mrs. William Randolph Hearst was given yesterday by Miss Sophie Irene Loeb, welfare worker.

More than 40 women, all of whom pledged Mrs. Hearst their support in her detention house undertaking, attended the luncheon in the Crystal room of the Ritz-Carlton Hotel.

At the end of the luncheon, Mrs. Hearst said:

"I have been interested in the detention house work for several years. Twice since plans for such an institution were first proposed other matters have arisen which blocked our progress toward their completion.

"This time they are going to be fulfilled. The city is going to get the detention house it needs so badly.

Mrs. Hearst first became interested in the work when, as chairman of the Mayor's committee of women in 1922, she was instrumental in pushing an appropriation of $750,000 for construction of such a house.

A motion, unanimously approved by the women present, stating their desire to see an immediate start made toward construction, was carried to Mayor Walker by Miss Loeb immediately after the luncheon.

The detention house, as described by Miss Loeb, will permit the separation of the hardened female prisoner from the one guilty of her first offense, and will, in its work, aid the wayward women back to a normal life.

Guests of the luncheon included:

Mrs. James J. Walker, Miss Alice Smith, Mrs. Felix Fuld, Mrs. Alice Young, Magistrate Jean Norris, Miss Stella Miner, Mrs. Mary H. Simkovitch, Mrs. Warren Smadbeck, Mrs. Louis S. Levy, Mrs. Sydney G. Berg, Mrs. Nelson Borland, Mrs. Harry H. Thomas, Mrs. Nelson Henry and Mrs. R. H. Patterson.

Others were:

Fannie Hurst, Mrs. S. Bayer, Countess de Baumont, Mrs. Bryce W. Turner, Mrs. Benjamin Stern, Mrs. Grover Whalen, Mrs. N. Stanton, Mrs. Hiram Mallinson, Mrs. Julius Miller, Mrs. James J. Bryne, Mrs. John H. Delaney, Mrs. C. C. Wyckoff, Mrs. Royal Copeland and Mrs. Bedelle Parker.

Still other guests included:

Mrs. James Knott, Mrs. Harold M. Roberts, Miss Thea Rasche, Mrs. Walter Irwin, Mrs. Harmon August, Mrs. Julian Gerard, Mrs. Lucy V. Long, Mrs. Alfred S. Rossin, Mrs. Joseph Moore, Mrs. Mary Paddan, Mrs. James L. Laidlaw, Miss Laura Wilcke, Mrs. E. T. Allen, Mrs. William C. Clark, Mrs. Jack Rainier and Mrs. Wallace Irwin.

SHIFT CITY FUND TO PAY WAGES

City Council transferred $14,529 from the city property bureau to the bureau of highways and sewers when it was found no funds were available for the wages of street cleaners. At the same time City Treasurer Wallace Borland asked for a conference between the Finance Committee of Council and the Board of Public Education to discuss the proposal of an increase in the pro rata share paid by the school board for collection of the educational tax. He said the board should pay $54,828 instead of the $31,252.56 in this year's budget.

POLICEMAN HIT WITH ROCK

A rock hurled at close range from a darkened doorway or alley felled Patrolman John Matton while he was patrolling his beat at Liberty avenue and Thirty-sixth street early today. Patrolman Matton went to the West Penn Hospital, where it was found several stitches were necessary to close a deep laceration on the right side of his face.

PATRICIA PITT'S COMMENT ON SOCIETY HAPPENINGS

Cousins of Distinct Branches of Old Family to Wed, Uniting Two Fortunes

IT'S NOT very often that two cousins marry, but it is less often that two cousins having the same surname and representing two distinct branches of an old and distinguished family wed. When Alexander Jay Wurts and Elizabeth Wurts are married on December 27, however, Pittsburgh society will have an example of such a coincidence. By their marriage they will unite two fortunes as well as two branches of the same family, many of their friends intimate.

Mr. Wurts, who lives in the old Wurts home on Shady avenue, belongs to the branch of the family which has residred in Pittsburgh. Elizabeth is the daughter of the Edward V. Wurts of East Orange, N. J.

Alexander Wurts is related to such prominent Pittsburgh families as the Thomas Childs Wurts of Northumberland avenue and the William Holdship Reas of Woodland road.

Although Mr. Wurts is seen at many important functions, he is more interested in intellectual than social pursuits. His hobby, or rather his greatest interest, is science. And at one time he was head of the physics department of the Carnegie Institute of Technology. He is still interested in that school, for he is chairman of the student welfare committee at the present time. The engagement, up to the present time, he has made known to only a few of his personal friends.

ALTHOUGH pretty Nan Bunton, daughter of the Charles C. Buntons, who will make her debut on December 21 at a tea dance in the Pittsburgh Country Club, true to her Southern heritage, loves to dance and take part in any social merriment, she also has a more serious aspect to her nature. For during the last year, she happened to mention to me yesterday, she spent much of her time at the Kingsley House and the Irene Kaufmann Settlement, entertaining less fortunate boys and girls.

Nan, on her mother's side, is a descendant of the Riddells, of Covington, Ky. Mrs. Bunton is especially prominent in the little Southern cliques of the city and was president of the Southern Club during the last season.

One of Nan's friends, Priscilla Barnes, daughter of the G. W. Barnes family, of Howe street, one of last season's buds, also spends much of her free time at the Kingsley House.

BRIDE IN RECENT WEDDING

Mrs. Henry J. Gelm will be remembered as Miss Grace Madigan, of Savannah avenue, Wilkinsburg, before her recent wedding.

MRS. HENRY J. GELM

ALTHOUGH she was president last year of the Junior League, Sarah Mellon won't be able to attend the formal opening of the national club tooms of the organization, to be held in the form of a tea Thursday afternoon in New York. It's not surprising, for this popular society girl has been much occupied, it would seem, with preparations for her wedding to Alan Magee Scaife on November 16, and with having such distinguished guests in her home as the President and the first lady of the land.

NOW another out-of-town girl is to wed one of the most eligible young bachelors of the Pittsburgh society set. For Miss Elizabeth Swift Ogden, whose mother, Mrs. Everett Malcolm Hawley, of Philadelphia, announced her daughter's engagement to Clark Miller, son of Judge J. J. Miller, several weeks ago, has named her date. The wedding will be one of the most prominent Easter marriages, and will take place the afternoon of April 14 in the Church of St. Martin's-in-the-Field, Chestnut Hill.

A change has been made in the date for the coming out party of Miss Mary Elizabeth McMahon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry B. McMahon. The tea will be given November 14, instead of November 23, in the McMahon home in Coraopolis Heights.

* * *

Plans are being discussed for the annual dance to be given by the Pittsburgh Chapter of Trinity College Alumnae in the Hotel Schenley December 28.

Lois L. McGhee Becomes Bride of L. K. MacMillan

Mrs. Thomas C. McGhee, Jr., of Jancey street, announces the marriage of her daughter, Miss Lois Lowry McGhee, to L. Kinsey MacMillan, son of the Rev. and Mrs. U. W. MacMillan of Portland street, which was solemnized last Wednesday by the Rev. Charles H. Robinson of Wheeling, W. Va.

The tea which always concludes the weekly meeting of the College Club is an important event of each Friday afternoon. In addition to giving the meetings a social aspect, the tea hour provides an opportunity for the members to visit with one another. For this week Mrs. W. W. Anderson has been appointed chairman of the hostess group and will be assisted by Mrs. Ernest Foster, Mrs. Henry M. Hallet, Miss Louisa Knox and Mrs. Thomas Trimble. The speaker for the afternoon is Dr. Roswell H. Johnson of the University of Pittsburgh and his subject, "Russia in Flux." Dr. Johnson spent the summer in Russia, studying the social and economic conditions of the country and will, without doubt, have much of interest to pass on to his audience.

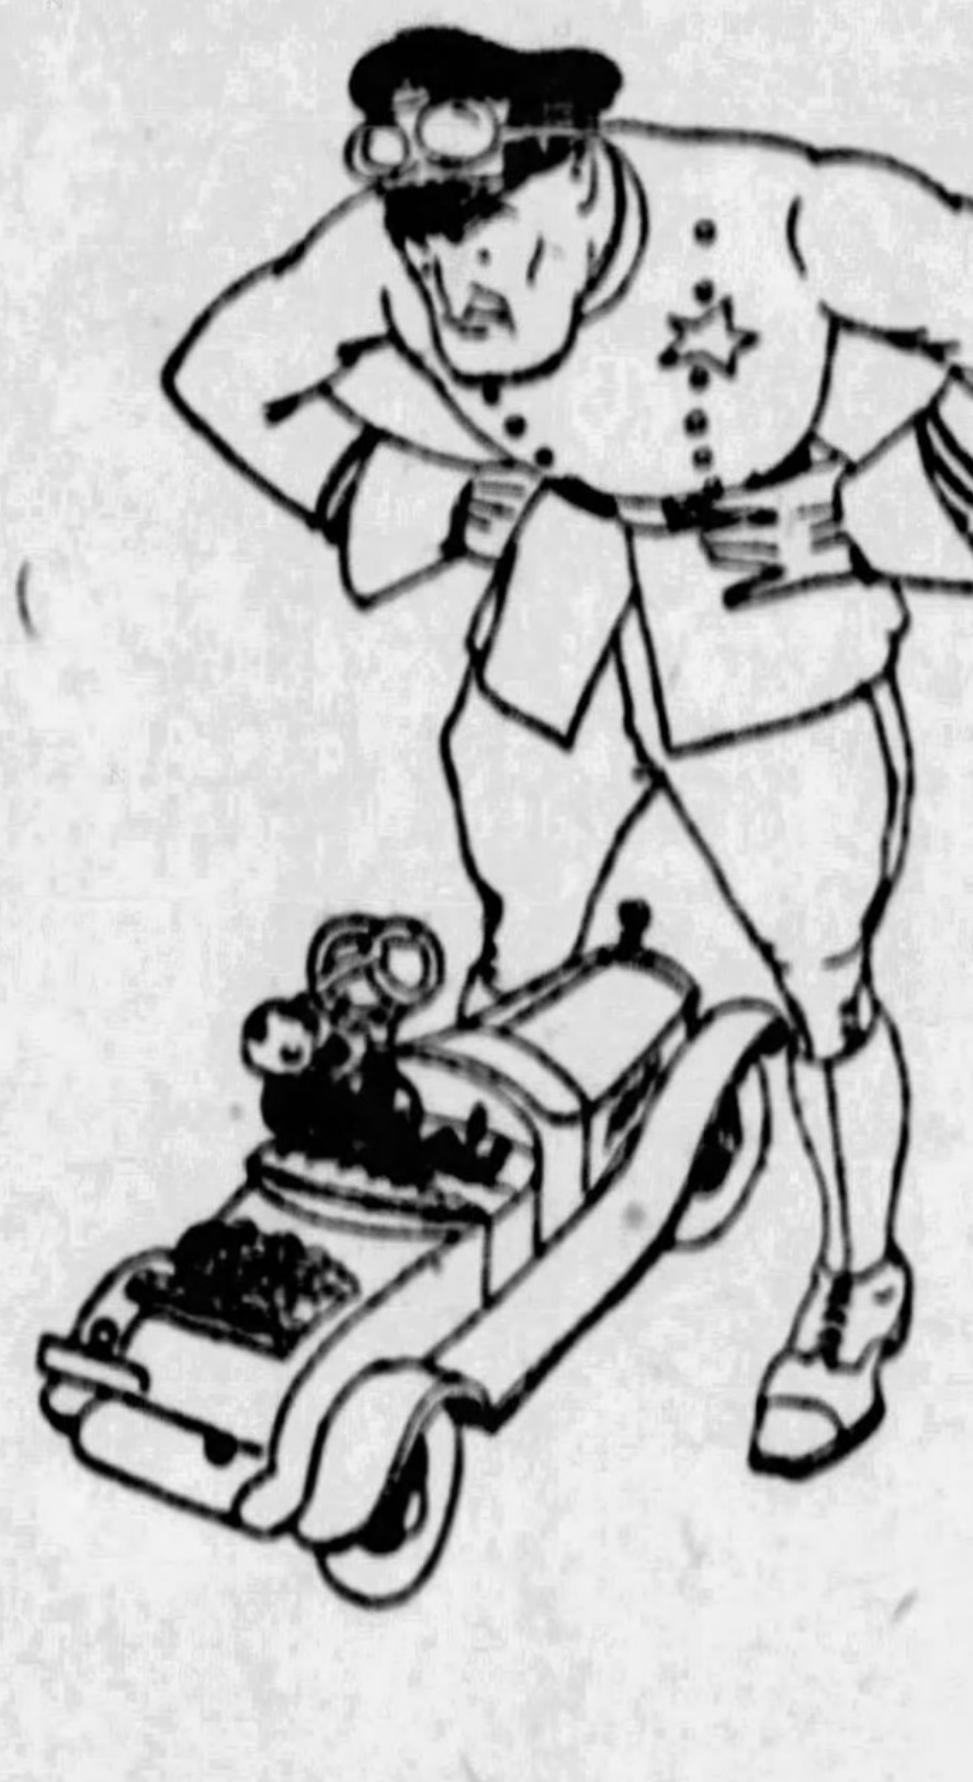
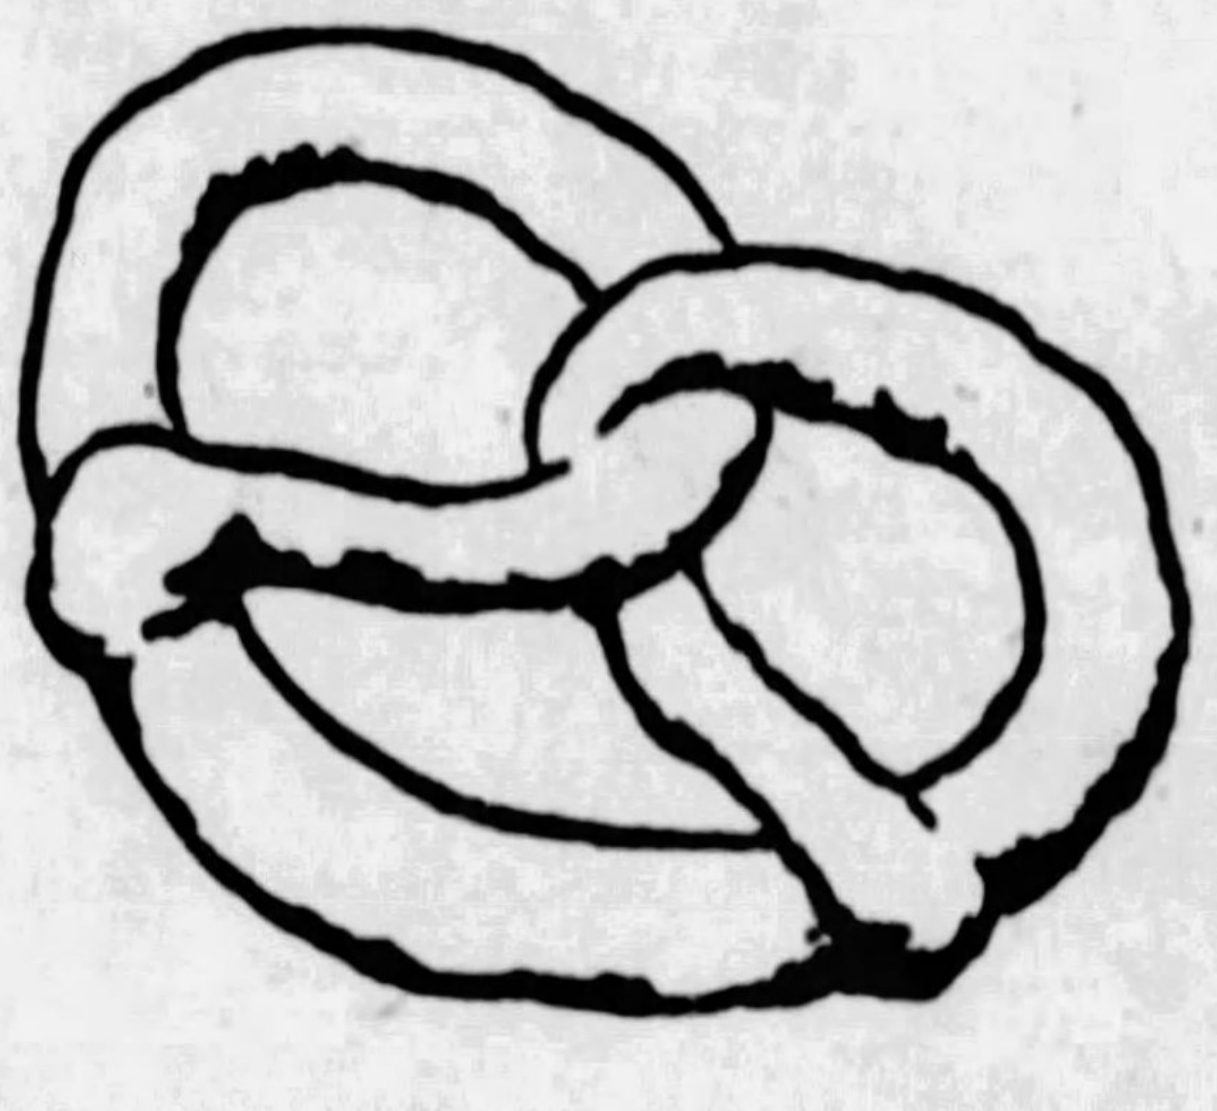
Bite yourself an Alphabet





Here's a tip for pretzeleers on wheels

Suppose you go fast, and the naughty policeman stops you and gives you a lot of jaw. Can you jaw back? You can, but don't. While the speed cop uses his jaws to talk, you use yours to pretzelize. Bite out these five letters for him:

SORRY

Chances are he will let you eat your word and depart in peace.

Of course you'll want O-So-Gud Pretzels baked by Uneeda Bakers. This is the kind that all good pretzeleers use for eating and for pretzeleering.

They're brown. They're crisp. They're crunchy. They're salty. Easy to digest. Good for grand children and grand parents.

Eat them with soup, with salad, with cheese, with sweet desserts. Serve them with cool iced drinks. Eat them between meals. Eat them without any excuse at all—except that you want to.

Ask for pretzels made by Uneeda Bakers. You will like them better.

O-SO-GUD PRETZELS

Who do you suppose invented the twisty pretzel knot that is the O-So Gud? And Why?

"ASK ME ANOTHER" FASHION QUESTIONS

By Sarah Van Rensselaer

My dear Miss Van Rensselaer:

Why is it that several brands of hosiery, all supposedly of a certain quality and weight, vary so greatly in price? I have bought several pairs marked with an unknown name for $1.49 that look exactly like the hose Kayser makes for $1.65. But, the former do not wear any length of time while Kayser lasts for ages.

Chicago, Ill. Mrs. P. L. M.

Of course, Kayser hosiery lasts long—because it is made of pure thread silk, which washes, and wears an astonishingly long time. The "unknown" hosiery is weighted silk—that is, it contains a solution that makes the silk appear lustrous, firm and of considerable body, but after the first washing this solution washes away and the silk is left sleazy, dull and shapeless. Don't be penny wise and pound foolish—always buy Kayser—one pair of this brand outwears three pairs of the inferior make. S.V.R.

Dear Miss Van Rensselaer:

My figure is inclined to be plumpish and I have vainly tried to effect the straightline silhouette—but the curves persist in dominating. I am most anxious to achieve this effect and have tried several different diets recommended by specialists and various electrical treatments for reducing—all of no benefit for the curves persist in dominating. Friends have advised me to ask your advice.

Santa Barbara, Calif. Mrs. M. H. S.

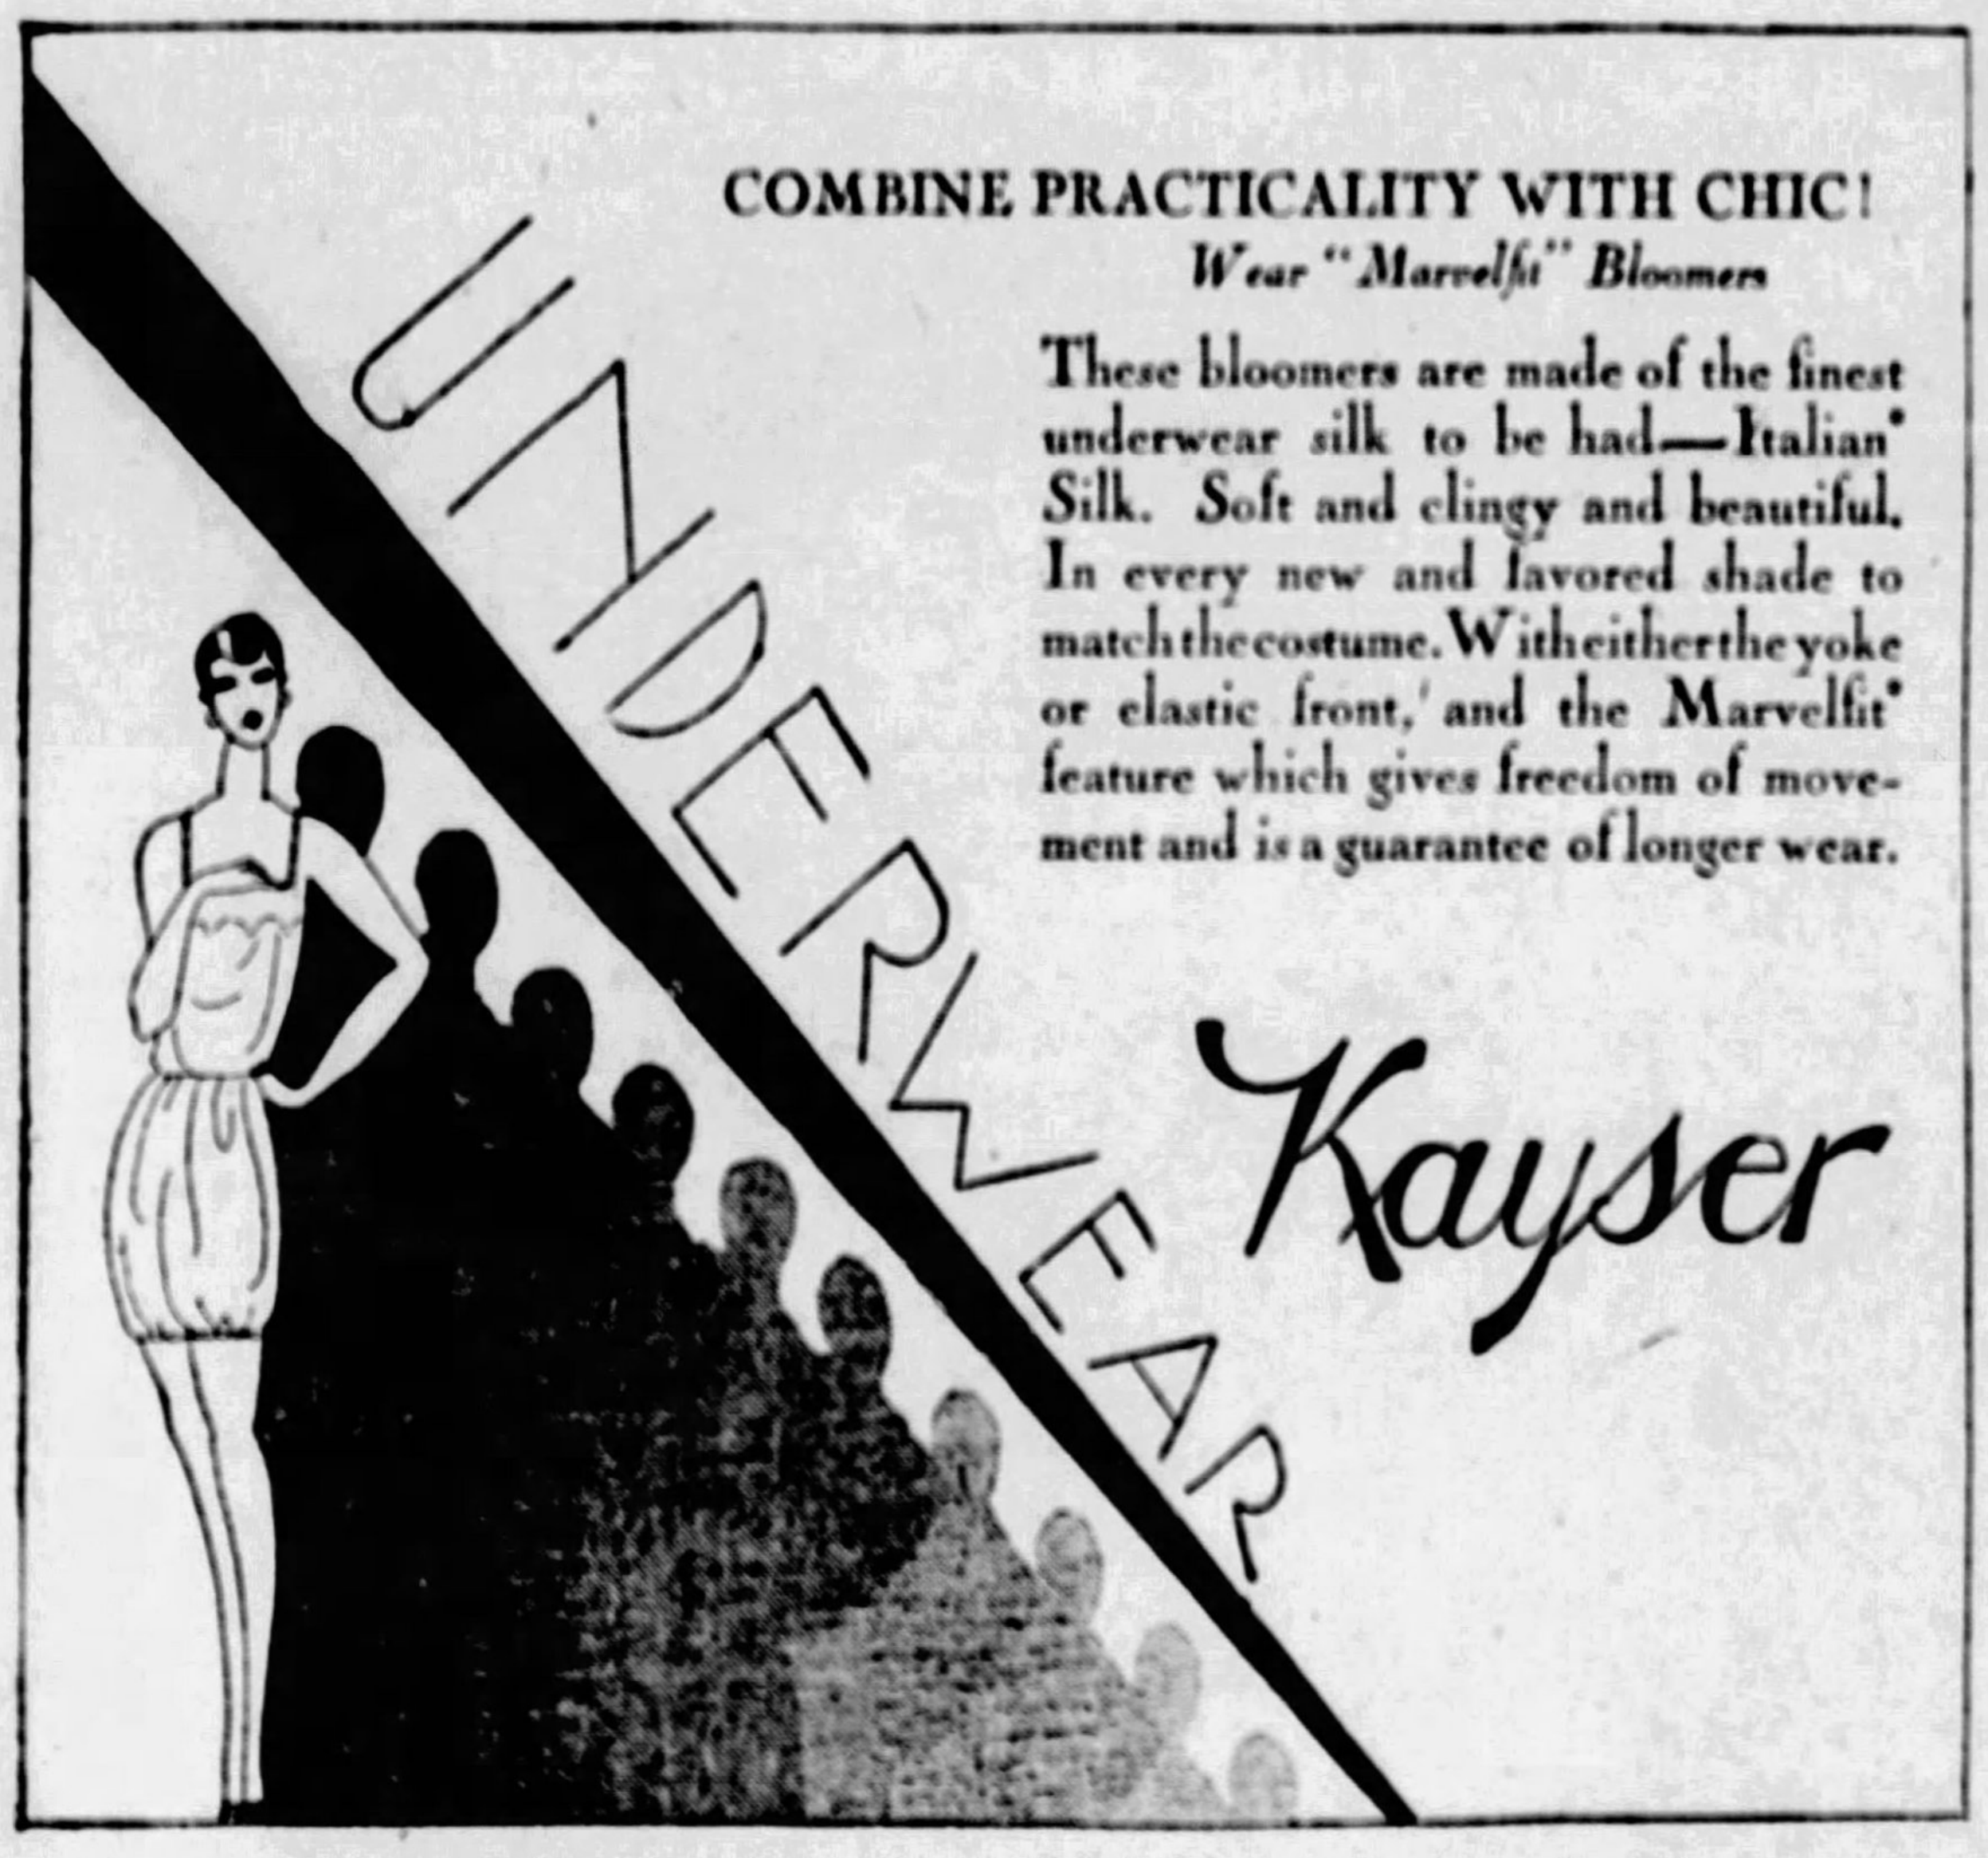
Look to the foundation of your costumes. Instead of bloomers with the gathered waistline wear the new, flat, yoke front bloomer or the new bandeau stepin that gives a boyish straightness to the figure. Kayser make these. In hosiery choose the kind that have the modern heels designed to give a slim, trim appearance. Slipper Heel* or Twin Heel* hose are both excellent styles. Wear long line frocks of tailored simplicity and Chamoisette* gloves with the slightly flared cuff. I'm sure you'll approve the results. S.V.R.

FOR EVERY COSTUME

A "Chamoisette" Glove

Think of it! That's how wide is the variety of styles and colors in the inimitable Chamoisettes.* An exclusive Kayser fabric that has warmth without weight, beauty of texture, washes easily and dries quickly.

Kayser



COMBINE PRACTICALITY WITH CHIC!

Wear "Marvelfit" Bloomers

These bloomers are made of the finest underwear silk to be had—Italian* Silk. Soft and clingy and beautiful. In every new and favored shade to match the costume. With either the yoke or elastic front, and the Marvelfit* feature which gives freedom of movement and is a guarantee of longer wear.

Kayser

TO ACHIEVE A SLIM TRIM ANKLE

Wear "Slipper Heel" Hose

Slipper Heel* was expertly designed to create a sly illusion—that of a slim, trim ankle. It was ingeniously accomplished by lines that converge in a point rather than the square. And, is immeasurably successful—it seems to take off inches. Prove it to yourself by wearing a pair.

WILKINSBURG CLUBS JOIN TO HEAR MRS. J. O. MILLER

The Wednesday Afternoon, the Thursday Afternoon and the Civic Club of Wilkinsburg joined with the Woman's Club yesterday afternoon and filled the roomy auditorium of the Y. W. C. A. Community House. They had come to hear a talk on "Current Politics" by Mrs. J. O. Miller, chairman of the Pennsylvania League of Women Voters (knowing that such a talk is always worth while), and a very delightful musical program by Mrs. Minerva Roop Cochran. Mrs. Cochran, whose full, rich soprano voice was heard in a group of three songs, was accompanied by Mrs. Ethel Miller Dunn. Mrs. Miller spoke briefly in the interest of the membership campaign of the County League and mentioned the benefits to be had in affiliating with the organization. She then went on to a discussion of "a most interesting thing which is happening in Pennsylvania today"—the breaking up of party domination and the opening of the ballot boxes. She discussed, too, the possibilities of the situation if Vare is found "counted in." There has never been so much rebellion in the ranks of the voters as at present, Mrs. Miller went on, saying that a political revolution, which has been in the making for some time, is coming in Pennsylvania. On the county commissioner election situation, Mrs. Miller observed: "They are going to have to do some very nice mathematics and decide just how many votes they can spare Mr. Houlahen and not lose their own two big boys." She asked each woman to mark every office for which she was voting and not to be satisfied with the one "X" for the party, because, as she put it, "it is much more difficult to tamper with a ballot where each office is marked." There was also interesting discussion of the bond issues which the people will be asked to vote upon next year, issues, if voted for, which will put the state in debt to the amount of $135,000,000.

Mrs. W. C. Hawley, the new president of the Woman's Club, announced a meeting with the Edgewood Woman's Club on October 26, which will be addressed by Clayton Hamilton, critic and lecturer.

Pittsburgh seems to be a favorite city for women's conventions, for the second within as many weeks will take possession of its gates today when the Pennsylvania Congress of Parents and Teachers opens its twenty-eighth annual meeting in the Hotel Schenley. While the Congress is not purely a woman's organization and cannot rightfully be called such, women are vastly in the majority, as they are in any movement where the interests of home and children are the chief concern. The convention banquet tonight in the hotel will mark the official opening, but there was a board meeting at 9:30 this morning and a luncheon in the University Club at noon for members of the board of directors, the Allegheny County Parent-Teacher Association acting as the hostess organization.

"Our Responsibility to the Child" is the theme of the convention. A list of persons prominent in the educational world will be present at the banquet. The Rev. Dr. Samuel Black McCormick is to be toastmaster, the Rev. Dr. Percy G. Kammerer will pronounce the invocation, and the speaker will be Dr. James N. Rule, deputy superintendent of the Department of Public Instruction at Harrisburg. Also to present their greetings will be Dr. George D. Robb, of Altoona, president the State Educational Association; Dr. William M. Davidson, superintendent of Pittsburgh schools; Dr. John G. Bowman, chancellor of the University of Pittsburgh; Dr. Charles E. Dickey, superintendent of Allegheny county schools, and Mayor Charles H. Kline. Music will be by the South Hills High School Orchestra.

A group of songs by Mrs. Samuel Milliken, accompanied by Mrs. J. R. MacGregor, piano solos by Mrs. Sylvia Hibbs McBeth, and a paper on "Naples and Its Environs," by Miss Anna Hasley, made up the program for yesterday's meeting of the Pittsburgh Literary and Musical Club. The members met, as usual, in the Business Women's Club.

* * *

Mrs. R. C. Wylie is speaking on "Americanization" at today's meeting of the Sterrett Women's Christian Temperance Union in the Community House, Union avenue, North Side.

After luncheon in Webster Hall today, members of the Young Women's Club visited the International Art Exhibit at Carnegie Institute. Mrs. D. L. Steinberg was chairman for the day.

THREE BUCS ON ALL-STAR NATIONAL LEAGUE TEAM

Who Remembers When Tech Was Rated a Pitt Set-up?

★ SUN-TELEGRAPH ★ SPORTS ★

Here's a Colorful Quintet

If there is anything in the theory that color is stimulating to the brain, Pittsburgh Tech should have an unbeatable basketball team the coming season. Its players will wear jersies of scarlet and black, striped vertically, and the pants and sweat shirts will be of scarlet, trimmed with black.

SHOTS and PASSES

By Julius Levin

ZIGGY KAHN, athletic director of the Irene Kaufmann Settlement House, is mapping out a program for the basketball campaign that promises to place the Center avenue community passers among the leaders in local amateur circles.

The Irene Kaufmann Settlement House abounds in first-class basketball material and indications are that several strong quintets will wear its colors on the floor this winter.

Red Sapira, who starred for the Bumer Somerman club in the Pittsburgh and Ohio Valley League last winter, will be one of the regulars on the senior quintet at the I. K. S. this season.

THE Doc Gordons, winners of the A. A. U. championship last winter, have no intention of resting on their laurels this season. The Gordons hope to make the coming season one of the best in the history of the club.

An extensive schedule, including the leading first-class amateur teams of Western Pennsylvania, is being arranged for the A. A. U. champions this season. Incidentally, the club will have every regular of last year available for service this winter.

AN amateur league that would include such well-known community centers as Heinz House, Community House, East Liberty Y. M. C. A., Young Men's Hebrew Association, Sharpsburg Y. M. C. A., Lawrenceville Y. M. C. A. and Hill Top Y. M. C. A., would prove popular in local basketball circles, in view of the dearth of professional loops hereabouts.

These quintets meet one another during the regular season and a league would have a tendency to stir up considerable interest.

AL SPEER, prominent tristate referee, has been transferred to New Kensington by his firm, but will be available for basketball teams in the Greater Pittsburgh district this winter.

Speer is one of the best officials enrolled in this section and as a result is much in demand as a referee.

BACKERS of the Commercial-Industrial League, which functioned at the South Side Market House last winter, are looking forward to another successful floor campaign this season.

The Commercial-Industrial loop includes among its players some of the best independent stars in this vicinity and its games compare favorably with the best staged hereabouts.

Several newcomers have made applications for berths in this popular circuit and indications are that it will be stronger than ever this winter.

THE popular West Penn League, an amateur organization that boasts some of the strongest simon-pure quintets ever organized in this section, will function this season with a roster of clubs that are considered more evenly matched than last winter.

Kingsley House, Trinity Choir, John H. Irwins, Knickerbockers and the Duquesne Saltzers are expected to retain their franchises in this circuit. These five clubs are enough to assure the followers of this loop some heated competition this winter.

Al Underwood, organizer of this league, is to be congratulated on the fine caliber of clubs he has enrolled for the West Penn League.

Waner Duo Get Places

Three Pirates Make All-Star Combination

All-National League Team Selected by George E. Phair, Universal Service Staff Correspondent

POSITION.	PLAYER.	CLUB.
Catcher	Hartnett	Chicago
Pitcher	Root	Chicago
Pitcher	Petty	Brooklyn
First Baseman	Terry	New York
Second Baseman	Hornsby	New York
Shortstop	Jackson	New York
Third Baseman	Traynor	Pittsburgh
Left Fielder	Hafey	St. Louis
Center Fielder	L. Waner	Pittsburgh
Right Fielder	P. Waner	Pittsburgh

By GEORGE E. PHAIR,
Universal Service Staff Correspondent.

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—To this inept observer of baseball, the galaxy of stars mentioned above might be called an all-National League team.

It contains plenty of dynamite at the plate, artistic fielding, speed of hoof and head, an enthusiastic catching department, slick pitching in both arms of the service, and a smooth admixture of youth and experience.

To begin at the top of the batting order, Lloyd Waner is young, but pulsing with gas and base hits. Lloyd does most of his batting with his feet. He gets down to first base so fast that he makes many an infield hit that would be fatal to anybody else. He has shown traces of nervousness in critical spots, but that might be expected of any kid breaking into the big time.

Lloyd's nearest rival this year is Ed Roush, who succumbed to holdout fever last spring with the usual result. Holdout fever is generally followed by ailing feet.

JACKSON BEST AT SHORT

Travis Jackson is easily the best shortstop in the National League, in spite of an attack of appendicitis that laid him on his back during the training trip. He can do anything required of a shortstop—and how! He can bunt like a billiardist and his long drives have busted up many a ball game. Glenn Wright may have been a better shortstop a year ago, but that was another year.

Nobody will question the choice of Paul Waner, the elder of the Poison Brothers. The leading swatsman of the league, he is one of the most deadly flyhawks and a constant threat on the base lines. Paul and Lloyd make one of the best outfield combinations ever gathered under one roof.

At second base we have Rogers Hornsby, a slugger of parts and a leader of men. Rogers did not lead the league in hitting, as he has in other years, but he was right up there near the top, and his potent punches were a tremendous factor in keeping the Giants in the pennant race.

Snaring short flies is his only weakness, and his chief strength is his craving to fight until the last man is out. Frankie Frisch is a better base runner and a slicker fielder in some respects, but there the comparison ends.

Bill Terry is the first baseman who made the Giant fans forget George Kelly. It was his first season as a regular on the job and he made a regular job of it. Bill hit about .325, drove in a flock of valuable runs and conducted himself with great eclat in the field. He is the best first-sacker in the league at starting double plays. Jim Bottomley is no slouch, either.

PIE AT HOT CORNER

Pie Traynor has everything a third baseman needs and is undoubtedly the best National Leaguer in that position. He has a powerful arm, a steady head and plenty of speed in his insteps. With Jackson playing beside him, few ground balls should leak through that side of the infield. Not only that—he hits with verve and finesse. Freddie Lindstrom was a close rival late in the season, but a sore back kept him off the job most of the year.

JOHNSON

Bradley, to make Walt an offer and for Walt to accept.

Sports editors of local newspapers started the campaign to bring Johnson to Cleveland to succeed Jack McCallister, who failed to do much with the team during the past campaign. One of these editors, Ed Bang, a close friend of Owner Bradley, is being mentioned prominently in connection with the job that folks expect E. S. Barnard soon will give up, to take over the presidency of the American League. That job is president of the local club.

Newspapers carried screaming headlines yesterday, "Johnson to Lead Tribe," and folks on the street awoke to the fact that the idol of baseball might soon be residing among them. Friends and business associates of Bradley thronged his office yesterday, pleading with him to make an effort at least to get Johnson.

Besides Old Barney, Billy Evans, Hughie Jennings, Roger Peckinpaugh, who's home is here, Tris Speaker and George Stallings have been mentioned as possible managers.

The only thing that can possibly be said against Johnson as a probable manager is his easy going way, it was pointed out. Walter has always been a private in the ranks and, consequently, has never been called upon to direct a team on the field.

time, a safer play would have been the thing.

LLOYD is just a boy, but seems to have the resourceful faculty. It is said that Honus Wagner never made the wrong play. The same kind of comment is offered in the case of Walter Maranville, and neither of these stars ever attended college. On the other hand, you will find collegians who throw the ball to wrong bases and run the opposite direction on the paths. Then, again, there is Mike Donlin's hero, who throws the ball to the wrong base and catches a smart baserunner. Mike says he knew a player of this type.

Speaking of the valuable players and the prize to be announced, it is interesting to dwell upon enemy artists who are sure to poll votes in the big competition. The Waner boys and Traynor are almost certain to get the bulk of the Pittsburgh ballots, although Kremer and Hill are likely to be honored. Frankie Frisch, of the Cardinals, will be close to the top in the reckoning, many believe. Now that it is all over I think that a mistake will have been made in the event that Travis Jackson is slighted. Jackson, I believe, was the best shortstop in the league during the season, and one that blended his skill for the uplift of the Giants.

ROGERS HORNSBY is out of the reckoning owing to his winning of the prize in 1925. McGraw has several other big stars, but none of them will threaten Paul Waner for the top honor. The Cubs had two big candidates in Leo Hartnett and Hack Wilson up to the time of the blowup of the club. The slump of the Bruins doubtless will hurt the chances of these two worthies. Cincinnati has Critz, who finished second to Bob O'Farrell last year, and Red Lucas, leading pitcher of the Reds and pinch man de luxe. Red should be favored with many ballots.

THE Dodgers have no candidates who stand out. Vance is out through having won the honor. The Braves had two sweet performers in Jimmy Welsh and Eddie Farrell, either of whom may draw some votes. Welsh I consider one of the best outfielders in the league. Jimmy can run, hit and field. Cy Williams and Fresco Thompson were daily headliners in the play of the Quakers.

PAUL WANER seems to have the inside track for the most-valuable-player prize in the National League, but if the matter were to be decided by a vote of the masses, Lloyd would get many ballots. Wilbert Robinson says the prize money should be increased and equally divided between the two youngsters. Had Paul not encountered a bad slump in the last few weeks of the season there would be little room for argument as to who should get the bulk of the votes. In his lapse, Brother Lloyd and Pie Traynor stood out in splendor. The play of these two and George Grantham as the club came down the home stretch appears to have swayed the flag to Pittsburgh.

TRAYNOR insists that Brother Paul is entitled to the prize for his consistency through five exciting months. Many folks think a valuable infielder is more to be desired that a valuable outfielder and therefore put Pie on the pedestal. But Pie is self-effacing by nature. In 1925 he said the same thing about Hazen Cuyler that he speaks now of Paul Waner. Pie at that time was a candidate for the coveted honor, but he insisted that Cuyler's remarkable season earned him first choice. Hornsby, however, was awarded the prize over the Pirate star.

HOPPE LEADS DE ORO BY SCORE OF 120 TO 70

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—(AP.)—Willie Hoppe led Alfredo de Oro by a score of 120 to 70 today as they reached the third block of their handicap three-cushion billiard match. Hoppe scored 60 points to De Oro's 34 in the first block and 60 to 36 in the second. The first block lasted 59 innings and the second 58. Hoppe must score 710 points in the 12 blocks comprising the match to De Oro's 504.

FIGHT

exchange of blows was nailed with a left to the jaw and a stinging right to the side of the head which cut his left eye and sent him staggering back to the ropes. Contact with the strands was not enough to break his fall and he slid down for a count of nine. He seemed badly hurt and began to feel the injured eye with his glove. At length he started to pull himself up and just beat the count and then weathered the storm until the finish of the session and boxed carefully throughout the last round.

At the finish, both boxers got a hand from the crowd, Rosenbloom for his clean-cut victory and Robertson for his game, hard fight under losing conditions from the start.

Rosenbloom weighed 168½ pounds at 3 p. m., and probably 172 at the ringside. He had agreed to scale 167, but Robertson did not claim his forfeit. Homer weighed 163½, which is about his top poundage.

The preliminaries all were good for action, making the bill as a whole the best of the season so far at Motor Square.

SAYLOR WHIPS JORDAN

Young Saylor of Charleroi, with his educated left hand, gave Lib Jordan, Negro of Johnstown, a beautiful shellacking all the way in the eight-round semi-final, but Jordan, like Robertson, never quit trying. A left to the body floored Jordan at the end of the first round, the bell ringing at the count of three, and he went down again in the fourth round for no count. Saylor looked very good and appeared ripe for a better class of opponents. He weighed 150 pounds, while his opponent scaled 155.

Eddie Carver, veteran Negro lightweight of the South Side, checked the winning streak of Jimmy Belmont, knockout artist of Braddock, in the six-round second bout, earning the award of both judges. Belmont started off fast and piled up a good lead in the first two rounds, but tired under Carver's "bulldogging" tactics and was all in and ready for a knockout at the end of the third round. Saved by the bell, he recuperated rapidly, and, by fighting a retreating battle, outscored Carver in the fourth round and held his own in the fifth. He tired again, however, and Carver once more had him within a punch or two of oblivion when the final bell clanged. The veteran's experience proved the determining factor. Carver weighed 139½ pounds and Belmont 141.

SEMAK-SPAGNOLA DRAW

Chuck Semak of McKeesport, 172 pounds, defeated Chuck Spagnola of Bloomfield, 173, in the opening bout, but the judges couldn't agree on the verdict, one giving Semak the award and the other calling it a draw, and the referee, Joe Keally, also voted it a dead heat. Semak had Spagnola down for a count of nine in the second round from a short left hook to the jaw and dropped him again for no count in the sixth and forced the fighting most of the way. It was a fast battle for big fellows.

Frank (Bull) Brown and Jock Simco were the judges and Red Robinson shared the refereeing with Keally.

SPORT LENS

for some bad football. Of course, little of this was true, but with the team losing, the stories gained far more circulation than they deserved.

Through all this, Dr. Sutherland kept his own counsel, knew that a winning team would dispel all such absurd stuff, and this year the doctor comes up smiling.

WITH WELCH as the spark, this year's team will attract national attention as the days wear on. A formidable line, a specialty of Dr. Sutherland's, and a backfield of power and capable reserves. Pitt will be heralded far and wide as one of the best in the country.

Every game so far—Thiel, Grove City, West Virginia and Drake—has represented nothing less than a slaughter of the innocents. This scoring enthusiasm is bound to be checked as the way grows harder with Tech, Wash-Jeff, Nebraska and State in the offing, but that anyone will stop effectively the Panther machine is very doubtful.

WASHINGTON AND JEFFERSON, when they come back to play Pitt, will have the great Amos groomed for his most brilliant effort, but Amos must gird himself for a terrific encounter. Bill must know that it is a tradition at Pitt that no highly-touted individual ever makes great headway against a Pitt team.

THERE'S no doubting the real class of Bill Amos, who, in the game against Tech, gave one of the finest demonstrations of running power, seen here in a long time, but Bill against Pitt will be up against a stonewall line and nifty set of secondary defensemen all bound to see that Bill does not run wild. The man who doesn't get a thrill out of looking forward to Bill's attempts against Pitt had better write in for descriptive booklet Z, telling about the best way to travel the road to happiness.

A LITTLE improvement in football would come if the officials by a pre-arranged code could signal the scoreboard boy why the various penalties are inflicted. The off-side penalty of five yards is well understood, but in most other cases the spectators—and the reporters, too—must make a guess.

IN negotiating a trade for Hazen Cuyler the position of the Pirate officials is not a happy one. Having in effect decreed that Cuyler is not so good, in trading with the enemy they must, after a fashion, reverse themselves to say that, after all, the outfielder has some good points.

The current guessing is that Cuyler may go to Philadelphia for Leach and Thompson, outfielder and second baseman, respectively, while another conjecture is that some deal bringing Critz here from Cincinnati will be tried.

If Cuyler lands with Philadelphia he may eventually hop over to New York. McGraw likes to buy developed material and Mr. Baker, Phil proprietor, is not averse to selling one of two men for the proper consideration.

Rich playtoys may be rich men, or beautiful women. It all depends on who is playing with them. Read "It Never Pays," beginning Thursday in The Sun-Telegraph.

Tunney Would Box Twice Next Summer

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—(UP.)—Gene Tunney sends word from the Maine woods that he wants to defend his heavyweight title twice next year.

One of his opponents, he expects, will be none other than Jack Dempsey, back for a third try after two conspicuous failures.

Tunney thinks his other opponent may be Tom Heeney, the New Zealander, who is considered by Gene the best of the crop of heavies who are about to take part in Tex Rickard's elimination tournament.

The heavyweight champion will insist that the fights be over the 15-round route and believes he would have ended all arguments by knocking out Jack Dempsey at Chicago last month if the battle of Soldier Field had not been limited to 10 rounds.

TEX DENIES HE WILL WITHDRAW FROM GARDEN

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—(UP.)—Tex Rickard, fight promoter vacationing in Hot Springs, Va., today set at rest reports that he was to withdraw from the Madison Square Garden Corporation.

In a telegram released at his offices here, Rickard said:

"Stories in New York newspapers to the effect that there is friction in Madison Square Garden and that I contemplate resigning are not true. I am still one of the largest stockholders and look forward to a prolonged period of prosperity for the Garden."

"Yes, Willard Mack is right, Luckies are best," says Paul Berlenbach

Popular pugilist tells his manager, Benedict Sterns, that Lucky Strikes are the finest cigarettes.

Willard Mack,
Noted Author, Producer and Actor, writes:

"We people of the theatre are, as a rule, extremists. This is the reflex action from overwrought nerves. When a man smokes forty cigarettes a day, as I do, he must be sure of his brand. I smoke Lucky Strikes because I have found they are soothing to the nerves and at the same time they cause no throat irritation. My voice is always in perfect condition and I am never troubled by any coughing which might be annoying to me in my work as an actor."

Willard Mack

You, too, will find that LUCKY STRIKES give the greatest pleasure—Mild and Mellow, the finest cigarettes you ever smoked. Made of the choicest tobaccos, properly aged and blended with great skill, and there is an extra process—"IT'S TOASTED"—no harshness, not a bit of bite.

Competition Is Good for Us All; Don't Fear Europe.

By D. C. FORBES

DOES competition tend to discourage you or does it spur you?

EVERY morning when I get off the train I have to walk with the crowd quite a distance through a station and a long passage to a subway. Often and often I have to smile at the way some of these humans behave.

The most common trait revealed is this: A man will be walking along leisurely when he has plenty of space, but when he is overtaken by the outpouring from an arriving train, he first glances a few times at those who hurriedly pass him; then as he begins to be hemmed in he takes on a spurt and from then on, if you watch, you will see him do his best to squeeze past those who passed him and he acts most impatiently when unable to go at it full tilt. His leisurely pace when all by himself becomes a rush when others start elbowing with him.

MAN normally is a lazy animal. At one time I lived among the most primitive of uncivilized blacks in Africa, and they certainly lived the life sung by Omar Khayyam. They did absolutely a minimum of work, only just enough to yield them the crudest of food and home-made drinks more or less intoxicating. Their inherent laziness was revealed also by the invariable practice among the males. As soon as they raised enough cattle or sheep to buy two or three wives, they didn't do another stroke of work, but compelled their wives to support them in complete idleness.

ANALAYZED, there is a distinct connection between the behavior of these primitive folks and the behavior of New York commuters. I have caught myself oftener than once doing exactly the same thing as other members of the morning mob—and, also, for that matter, of the evening mob, many of whom suddenly decide it is necessary to get a move on as soon as there is competition for space to walk in.

What makes us act so?

IS it not a desire, born sometimes of vanity, to keep ahead or get ahead of the other fellow?

Every man who is worth his salt has some ambition. He may be moved by a thirst for fame. He may be possessed by a burning desire to render some signal service. Spurred on by his family, his main objective may be to acquire enough money to make it possible to outdo neighbors and friends socially. The motive, the inspiration, the urge differs in different individuals. But always human effort is impelled by some cause, if nothing more than the stark necessity of earning an existence.

SHOULD we not, being made as we are, welcome anything and everything which stimulates us to achieve? I well recall being on a newspaper which had a monopoly of its field when word came that a rival paper was to be launched. Most of the men were greatly disturbed. But the wise old head of the organization calmly remarked that he welcomed competition because it would inject new energy and enterprise and determination into them. The outcome actually was that the old-established paper took on a new and much more vigorous lease of life and made far more money than ever before.

RARELY do the men who forge their way to the very forefront as towering executives come from families that reared their sons in lazy opulence. Just as the finest trees in our virgin forests of the Northwest are those that had to concentrate on climbing hard to gain a share of sunlight and could not dissipate their strength by sending out branches of no commercial value, so most of the biggest positions in America are held today by men who were spurred to effort by sharp necessity.

WE are beginning to hear much about impending European competition fiercer than any we have ever yet experienced. Don't become alarmed. Such competition will serve to prod us into greater effort and greater performance than ever before.

STOCKS ADVANCE AFTER HEAVY OPENING

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—(AP.)—Stock prices resumed their upward movement today after an early period of heaviness. With the technical position of the market undoubtedly improved by yesterday's sharp reaction, and a strong investment demand still apparent, as indicated by the prompt oversubscription of the $47,000,000 American quota of the $70,000,000 Polish loan, speculators for the advance resumed their operations with confidence. Early losses of 1 to 3 points were substantially reduced or wiped out, and in many cases replaced with moderate gains.

Bullish enthusiasm was engendered by President Coolidge's report of business improvement, and by Senator Smoot's prediction of a sizable tax cut by the next Congress. Lowering of the call money rate from 4½ to 4 per cent also was a factor.

United States Steel common, which had sold down to 142⅞ before midday, sold around 144½ by early afternoon. General Motors rallied from a low of 124¼ to 125⅞. Midland Steel Products preferred, Philadelphia Company, Brooklyn Union Gas and Underwood Typewriter sold 3 to 4 points above last night's closing quotations. Radio Corporation, Peoples Gas, Dupont, United States Rubber and Collins & Aikman advanced 2 points or more.

Rails were rather quiet, although brisk buying was noted in Wabash, Erie and some of the other so-called "merger issues."

CHICAGO BOARD

CHICAGO, Oct. 18.—All deliveries of wheat, corn and oats reached a new low price record today for the 1927 crop. Free selling from commission houses dislodged standing orders to let go of wheat and corn holdings at various fixed limits in order to stop losses on the downward swing of the market. Lack of adequate buying support contributed to the general weakness, which was influenced by reports that conditions now favor threshing and movement of the Canadian wheat crop.

Wheat closed heavy, 2⅛c to 2¼c net lower, corn 1⅞c to 2⅛c down, oats ⅛@⅜c@1c off, and provisions varying from 10c decline to a rise of 12c.

COTTON MARKET

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—The cotton market opened steady today at an advance of 6 to 16 points on continued covering by near month shorts, buying promoted by reports of frost in the Memphis district and a late rally in Liverpool.

The opening demand was quickly supplied by hedging or realizing, but after selling off from 20.80 to 20.67c for December, or within 6 points of yesterday's closing quotation, the price firmed up again on the predictions for light frosts in parts of the Carolinas, Georgia and Alabama. There was doubt, however, of damaging temperatures and the bulge met renewed southern or local selling, the market showing reactions of 12 to 15 points from the best at the end of the first hour.

The transaction, it is said, will probably be financed through the sale of additional stock to stockholders at par, and a bond issue.

Support Checks Break.

Despite the extent of the decline in various leaders, there are some signs that the market is stabilizing itself around current levels. Irregularity over the last few weeks has resulted in substantial liquidation of poorly held accounts. As a result, the general list is in stronger technical position than it has been for some time. Important addition to the outstanding short interest has also taken place, furnishing the market with a cushion of support which has been a strong sustaining factor on recent drives.

Seminole Gains 5,000 Barrels.

Crude oil production in the Seminole area for 24 hours ended 7 a. m. October 17 totaled 413,900 barrels, an increase of 5,000 barrels over the preceding 24 hours.

Steel Split-up Rumor.

There are reports in the Street of a coming split-up of Steel common on a two-for-one basis. That such action is likely is the opinion of the majority of those usually best informed on the corporation's affairs. It was pointed out that bankers controlling big corporations are desirous of widespread participation in ownership of leading business concerns and this can be brought about only if stocks are available at prices that will appeal to the small investor. No official indication of the Steel split-up, it was stated, would be given until after the turn of the year. At this time it looks as though announcement would come from the April meeting of directors.

American Window Glass Shows Loss.

American Glass Company for year ended August 24 last, reports net loss, after depreciation, royalties and other charges, of $311,559. This compares with net income of $420,110 for the year ended August 27, 1926.

Brooklyn-Manhattan.

Brooklyn Manhattan Transit System reports for September quarter net income of $1,173,051 after expenses and charges, equal after $6 preferred dividends to $1.11 a share on the 719,811 no par common shares outstanding, as against $1,732,534, or $1.77 a share in the September, 1926, quarter.

Further Mexican Curtailment.

Petroleum activities in Mexico have declined at least 10 per cent since January 1. With a continuance of present conditions, there will be a much further curtailment, the Department of Commerce announced.

New Lows Registered In Local Market

Quotations sagged on the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange today in reflection of the unsettled conditions prevailing in the New York market for the past several days. While pressure on the local leaders was not pronounced, the volume of stock sold was sufficient to force prices lower, and the early market showed losses of from 1 to 3 points from the last previous closings.

Standard Sanitary fell back sharply as bids for the issue were lowered. Not a great deal of the stock came out, but there was little interest on the buying side with the result that sellers were obliged to drop their offering prices to dispose of their shares. There was no news bearing directly on Standard, but traders were inclined to shun the buying side until such time as the general trading situation clears up in New York.

American Window Glass preferred registered the largest loss in the early session, a block of the shares changing hands at 101 as compared with the last previous close at 105. The company reported net loss of $381,350 for the year ended August 26, last, as against net income of $420,710 for the year ended August 27, 1926.

Lone Star Gas was the active member of the fuel division. At the start the stock displayed an upward tendency, but heaviness noted in some quarters served to choke off the move.

American Window Glass Machine preferred was another glass issue showing a wide decline from its previous price. The stock sold today 62½, a new low record and a drop of six points from the preceding sale, recorded about six weeks ago. Fears that the Machine preferred dividend may be suspended are partly responsible for the weakness, although the last payment on the issue was made only two weeks ago.

National Fireproofing dipped under 20, establishing a new low for the year, while Salt Creek Consolidated, at $6 a share, was down to the low point reached last January.

BUGS BAER Says

NEW YORK, Oct. 17.

THE annual electrical show in New York indicates that we are now dodging the world's greatest era of industry.

It is an exhibition of 25,000 electrical contrivances to save work without eliminating the wages.

Progress has taken some queer leaps since Ben Franklin came home late one night from the lodge and tied his key to a kite string in an effort to locate the keyhole.

ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER.

Ben saw sparks that night and claimed to have discovered electricity. Many a lodge member has piped sparks since that evening, but didn't have Ben's facility for blaming it on science and research.

That kite string and key have evolved into 25,000 electrical dib-dabs ranging from motorized curling irons to ultra-violet locomotives.

Electricity is more economical than any other mechanism with the possible exception of false teeth and weather vanes.

It is cheaper and faster to do work by medium brewed voltage. It saves time, labor and nerves. And you can always repair it later on by hand.

Everything about a modern apartment is operated by direct and alternating juice, including light, heat and argument. Sewing machines, stoves, radio, refrigerators and elevators are all run by buzzing wires even though we carry the system a little too far when we apply it to chairs.

The latest gadget is a potato masher which bangs potatoes to a whisper without the help of a human thumb. There is something majestic about the thought of an unseen force which reduces Long Island potatoes to a whimpering pulp.

The electric waffle iron is another stylish kitchen jewel which eliminates labor and perspiration. It also eliminates the waffle, but the emergency crew from the power station usually arrives in time to be witnesses to the cook's resignation.

The old method of steaming eggs in an antiquated skewer has been replaced by the galvanized procedure which operates on high voltage. This necessitates the placing of "danger" signs on the knives and spoons, and even the oven bears a placard which states that admission is to workingmen only.

Everything about the electrical kitchen is hazardous, since wires from the turkey to the stuffing may get crossed with high power lines from the plum pudding containing a liquid which still enables optimists to look at the world through rye-colored glasses.

The time has arrived when debutantes must wear overalls and carry a set of monkey wrenches when they attend classes to learn how to manicure a lady finger or extract the nourishment from synthetic soup.

All a cook has to know nowadays in a kitchen is what to do before the doctor arrives. Electricity does everything, from making butter to confusing an omelet, and it means better and healthier children, provided that science is correct in stating that 10,000 horsepower can take the place of a single cow.

ON "THE WONDER WORKER"

LOVE is the greatest Beauty TONIC in
The world, and yet, how very Few WOMEN there are
In the world who know
How to APPLY it,
If women buy a face
LOTION they use
It sparingly (with cotton wool even),
And they ENJOY it
At the time, and AFTER
And they BELIEVE in it,
Are they as thoughtful
Over LOVE? Certainly NOT! When someone
Gives them LOVE they want to DROWN in it,
And though they really WANT it, they don't always
Believe in it,
Love, like a lotion,
Is full of GOOD
Properties,
Left in the BOTTLE
Or applied too FREELY,
It does no GOOD,
But applied with KNOWLEDGE, skill and care,
ah!
It Can WORK WONDERS.

Adequate Airport Needed As Railroads Once Were

The campaign of the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce to obtain a new site for a Pittsburgh airport should be supported. Rodgers Field is said to be too remote from the city and too limited as to development possibilities to make it suitable. If that be true, Pittsburgh cannot act too quickly nor too effectively. We must be up to the times aerially or we'll suffer.

The project is one that must not be looked at through the small end of the glass, either. It is a big project and must be regarded as one. A million dollars is the sum tentatively mentioned. Possibly it should be millions. The cost must not be a bar to our progress—and we cannot hope to progress without adequate air facilities.

If argument is needed we can ponder on where we would be now without adequate railroad tracks and termini. We of today did not build them, but fortunately, we had fathers foresighted enough to vision the future. We are the fathers of tomorrow. Let us give our sons as much reason for thanking us for aerial facilities as our fathers have given us cause to be ever thankful for having given us our great railroad systems.

It will not be an easy matter to get the right kind of an airport. It was not an easy matter to get the railroads. All kinds of aids and agencies were resorted to. Private capital and public money in the shape of government, county and municipal bonds were rallied.

All kinds of aid will be necessary to give us what we need now. Be prepared to do your part in giving it.

Too Rich to Be Stingy

Our Underpaid Postoffice.

Postoffice employes, clerks, letter carriers, carry a heavy burden of responsibility in postoffice management, and should all be better paid.

The pay of the Postmaster General and of his chief assistants, managing a gigantic enterprise admirably, is preposterous. And the miserable pay of letter carriers and postal clerks is a disgrace to the richest country in the world.

Statements that the postoffice is run at a loss are false. For 25 years, as Congressman M. Clyde Kelly shows, the postoffice has been profitable. Franking privileges, used and abused by Congressmen and others, cost the country $15,000,000 a year.

The low rates, by special favoritism, granted to religious, scientific and fraternal publications cost $17,000,000 a year.

The franking privileges and special rates are not bad in themselves, perhaps. But losses caused by them should not be taken out of the pockets of hard-working, underpaid men.

The richest country in the world can afford to pay its letter carriers and postal clerks fair wages.

The postoffice is not run for profit, but for SERVICE. And good service should begin with generous treatment of those that actually RENDER service, distributing and carrying the mails.

High-Low Levels Touched In American Civilization

The highest and the lowest of which modern civilization is capable were thrown into sharp contrast on the evening of last May 20 at the Yankee Stadium, New York.

There, twenty-five thousand people had paid four hundred thousand dollars to watch Jack Sharkey and James Maloney attempt to batter each other into unconsciousness.

They stopped the preliminary slugfests for Joe Humphreys to make an announcement. He told them that "Slim" Lindbergh was a thousand miles at sea, all was well, and he asked them to rise and say a silent prayer for the flier. Every man in the stadium arose and bared his head.

What was the picture that presented itself to the mind of the twenty-five thousand men in the pause in the bloody business before them? They saw a heavy-loaded gray monoplane, piloted by a slender, yellow-haired youngster, lurching down the runway of Roosevelt Field in the misty morning ten hours earlier.

As the boy gambled with death, the plane staggered and fell, rose again to barely clear the telegraph wires at the end of the field, halted once more, and then slowly climbed into the sky and its historic mission. The spirit of American youth had triumphed. Lindbergh was on his way to Paris.

All these details from the evening papers were fresh in the minds of the twenty-five thousand. They spent their minute of contemplation and prayer, gave the cheer that Humphreys called for, and turned to the show for which they had paid $400,000.

In the sixth round Sharkey "finished" Maloney. This is Jack Sharkey's own description of the knockout:

"In the very first round I opened a gash under his left eye. In the third I started his nose bleeding, while by the fourth session I had his lips cut wide open.

"I could feel Maloney weakening. He also slowed down a great deal.

"With less than 10 seconds to go in the fourth round I landed the punch which turned the battle in my favor, with a driving left hook to the body. Maloney fell forward under the power of the punch.

"I then crashed my right to the jaw. As Maloney fell to the canvas I knew it was all over but the shouting. The bell saved Maloney for the time being.

"I measured Jim after the fifth round started. Once more a right to the jaw dropped him to the canvas. Again he got up without taking the benefit of any count. I held my right back again. As Maloney came forward I landed with another crushing right to the jaw. That settled Jimmy."

The historian of 50 years hence is going to have some trouble explaining how it was that, on the night Lindbergh was flying to Paris, 25,000 intelligent American citizens were watching this bestial exhibition at the Yankee Stadium, while hundreds of thousands more were following each blow on the radio.

He will be still harder put to it to explain that this legalized assault and battery, performed to the plaudits of a blood-thirsty crowd, was held under the auspices of a New York state commission, and that the Federal government, far from interfering with the exhibition, participated in its profits, and hence was a sort of partner in the enterprise.

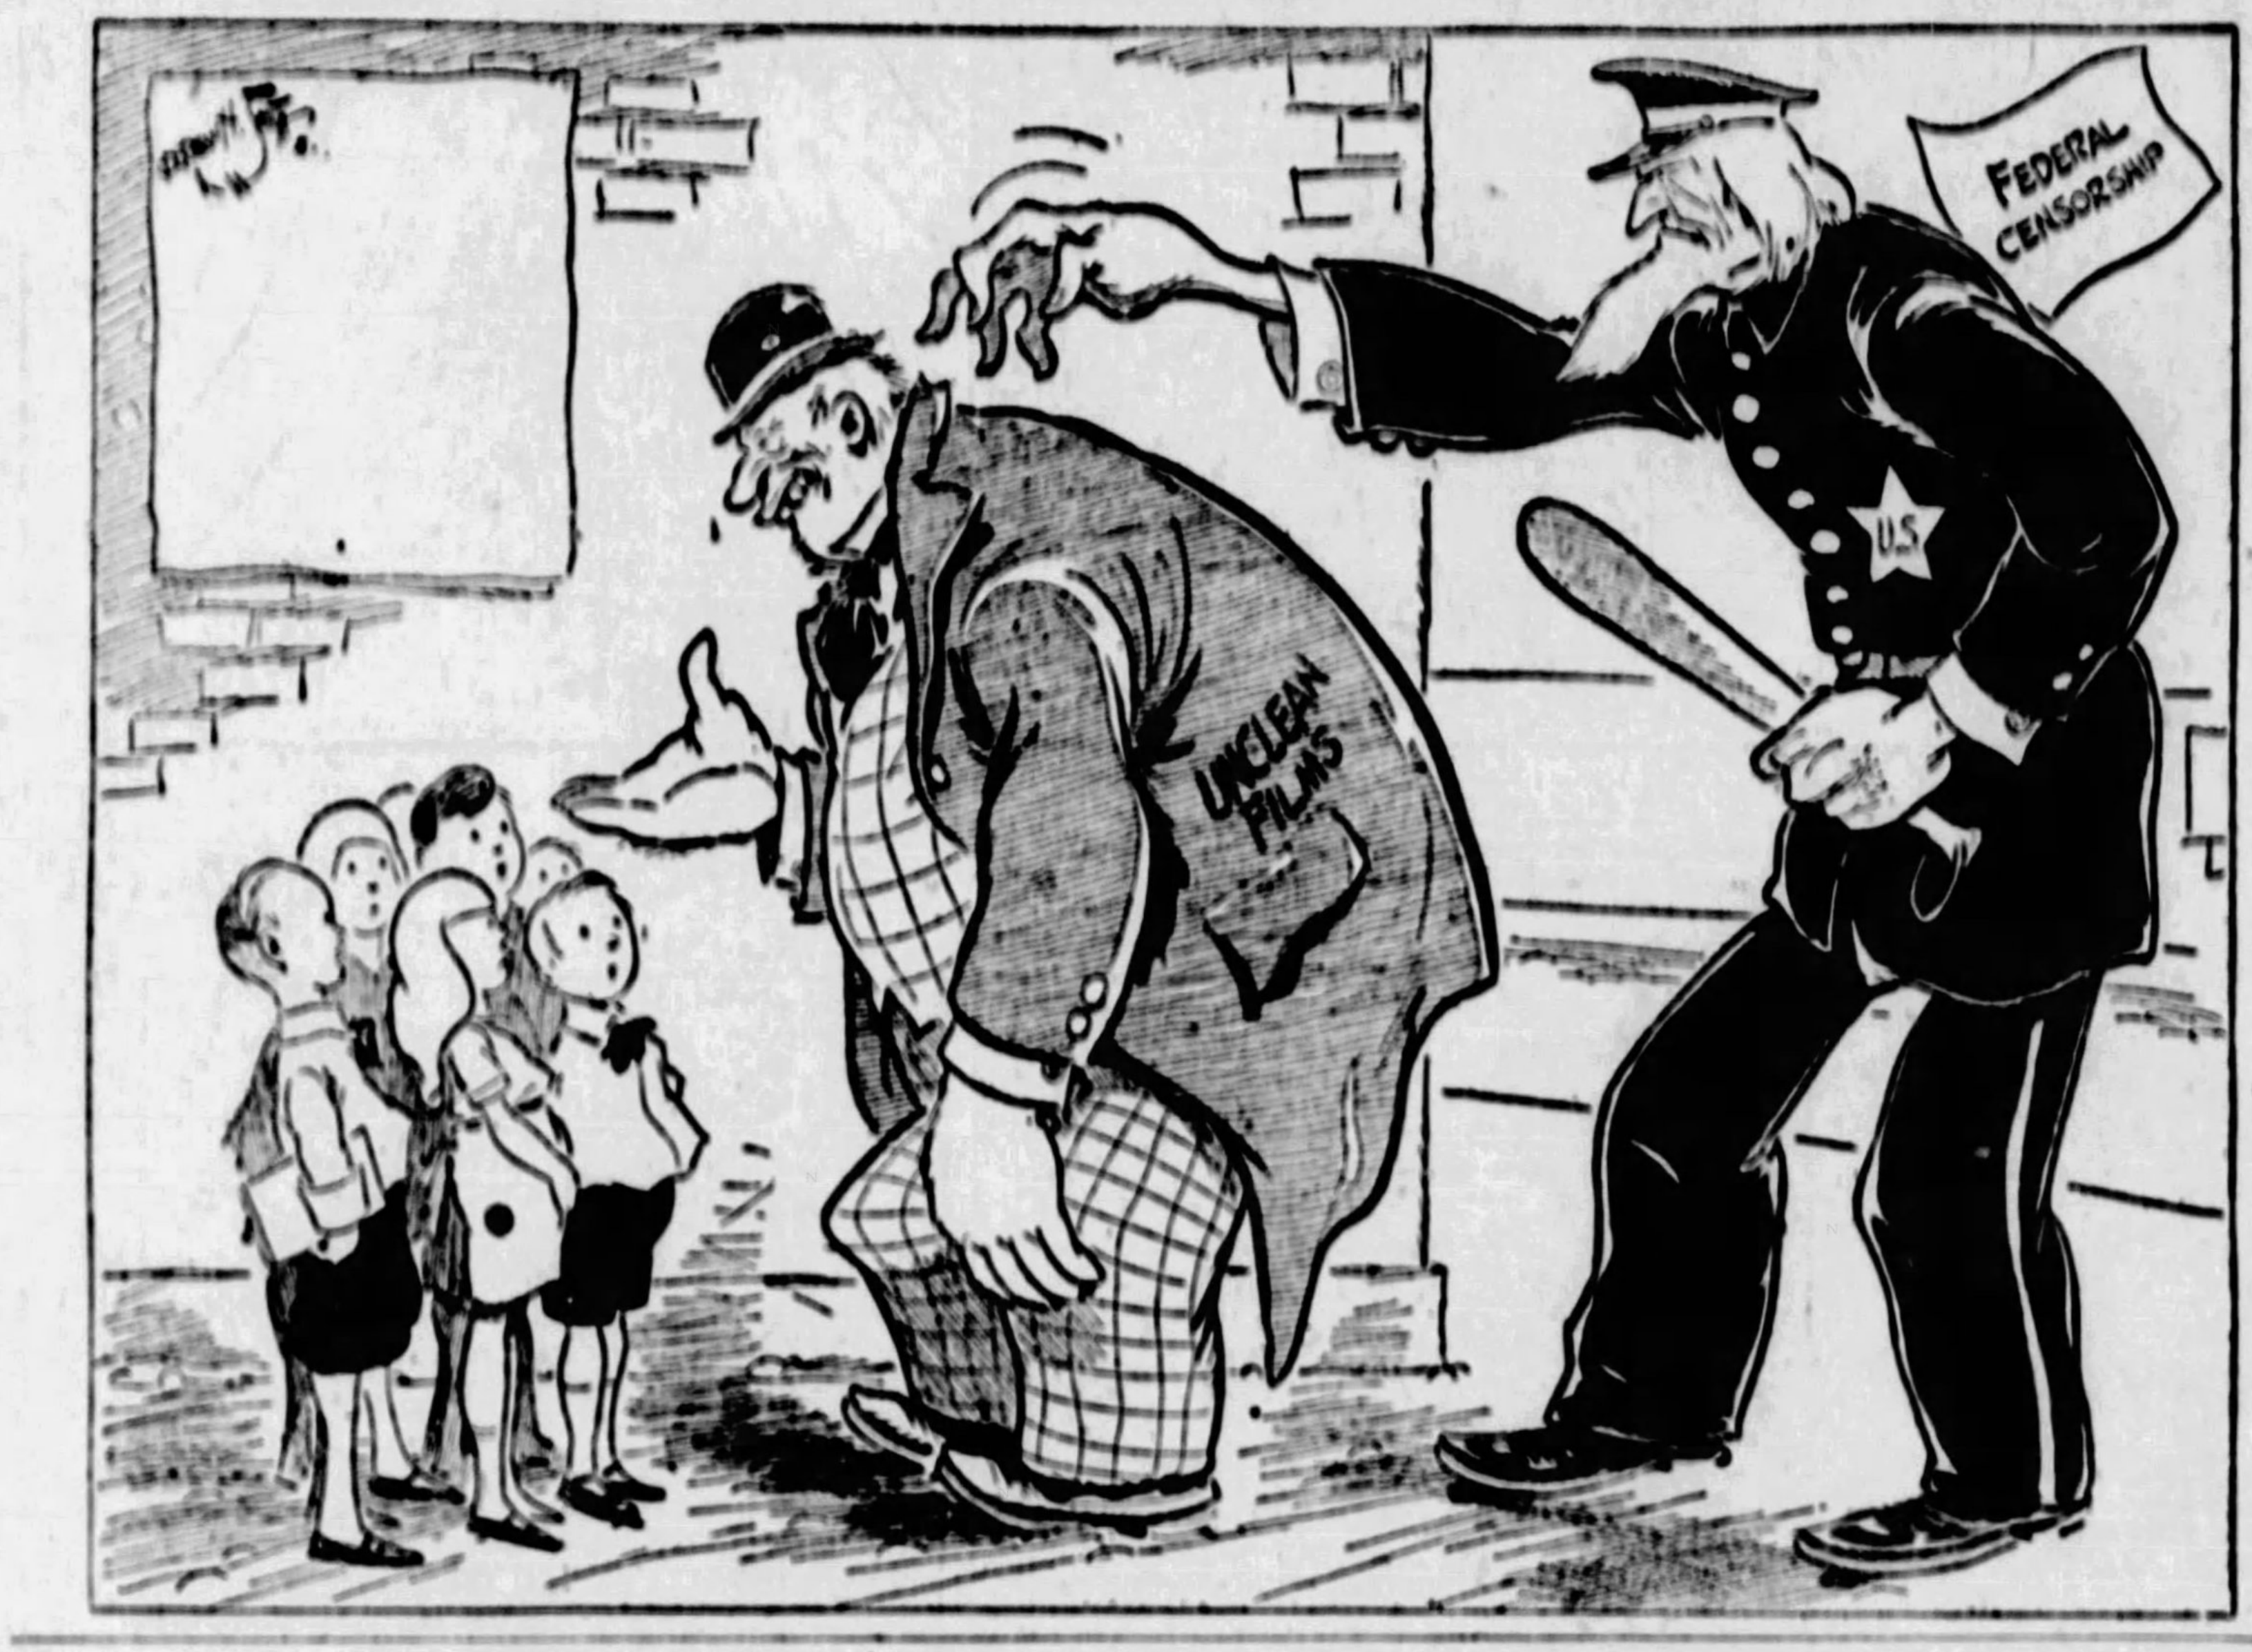
Talk Things Over

Inauguration of long distance telephone communication with Mexico by a conversation between President Coolidge and President Calles suggests something.

Our relations with Mexico get deplorably wrinkled every now and then. Some evening after dinner suppose that President Coolidge rang up President Calles and spent $12.70 of the Government's money to start a nice friendly chat, to be continued until all was serene at both ends of the wire.

That would be shockingly bad diplomacy, perhaps. But it might work wonders. There's nothing like man-to-man discussion for ironing out difficulties.

THE MENACE AND THE CURE



Garrett P Serviss Says:

Man Not a Machine

THE title of this article is that of a book recently published in England by E. Rignano, and it expresses a conclusion based by the author upon a very careful study of all the internal and external characteristics and relations of human life, as revealed by the various investigations of science.

The mechanistic and vitalistic philosophies are in irreconcilable opposition, and their encounters are often confusing to the outsider, so that this uncompromising utterance by a competent thinker familiar with all the facts and speculations is reassuring to read.

Rignano dwells upon the evidently purposive character of the actions that form the test in deciding between the two antagonistic views of the nature of man. One of the most telling replies to the mechanistic claim that our apparently mental acts are all the result of mere bodily automatism, is to be found in a little book by C. E. M. Joad on "The Mind and Its Workings."

The mechanists say that when a stimulus is applied from without to one end of the nervous chain formed of the nerve cells of the body and the brain, the appropriate reaction will occur at the other end in as purely a mechanical way as the operation of a penny-in-the-slot machine. If a bee stings your hand the news is flashed by one set of nerves to the brain; there an automatic apparatus of nerves instantly sends out an impulse causing the hand to jerk itself away.

Yes, says Joad, but suppose I am hanging on the edge of a precipice with one arm only, and a wasp stings the hand that does the holding. I shall probably not withdraw the hand in spite of the stimulus that the sting has imparted to that famous automatic mechanism in the brain. Something else has taken charge that is stronger than the alleged automatism, and that bids me to hang on hard.

What is it that thus interferes? Mind, say the vitalists. Not so, respond the mechanists, or the "behaviorists," it is only another set of automatic impulses that take possession of the motor nerves and prevent the passage of the impulses that would cause the fingers to relax their grip. Sometimes the relaxing impulse might capture the right of way ahead of the other, and then the man would fall. It would all depend upon circumstances in the automatic "clearing house" of the brain.

But common sense will ask: Is it not more reasonable to suppose the restraining impulse, which arrests the tendency to move the hand when the sting is felt, to be a purposive act inspired by mental comprehension of the consequences that must follow the letting go?

This common sense view accords with the conclusion reached by Rignano in his book. But the mind itself takes on a somewhat strange aspect in the latest theorizing about it. Joad mentions the following as an example of the way the mind "works up" impressions received from without. If we go to a foreign theater where the language though known to us is understood with difficulty, we must sit much nearer the stage than at home, because when we listen to someone speaking our own tongue the proportion of his uttered words that we actually hear is comparatively small, the mind supplying the rest by guesswork. We expect him to say certain things on analogy from past experience, and so we have to hear only a very little for our minds to take the cue and add the rest. But this activity of the mind does not occur when the language is unfamiliar.

Once Overs

By J. J. MUNDY

Be Grateful

FOOLISHLY and restlessly you wish always for the unattainable.

Is it because you fail to get pleasure from your possessions?

Your income, your social position has its limits.

Why worry over what is beyond your power to procure?

It is fine to have aspirations, to try for better things but you can carry your ambition too far.

To continually make comparisons between what you have and what some of your friends have is to lose a lot of joy that belongs to you.

Finally you begin to pity yourself.

You believe the world has not given you a fair deal.

And possibly you try to get what you want anyway, by fair means or foul. Then you are headed for trouble.

It does not take long to bring dishonesty and disgrace to your door, if you indulge in wrong thoughts.

Be grateful for what you have; many have less and are happy.

Tales That Are Told

Crazy About It

"KEEPS up her music, I see, the dear child and still finds time for domestic duties, I hope?"

"My yes, you should just see her fancy-work. Fancy-work's everything that child does. Why, her father daren't bring a porous plaster into th' house f'r fear she'll crochet a pink border round it and run a yellow ribbon through th' 'oles."—Bulletin, Sydney.

Beyond Him

HE WAS a good natured Irishman, and one of a gang of men employed erecting a new building. The owner of the new premises had taken quite a fancy to the son of Erin.

"Pat," he said, "didn't you tell me once that a brother of yours is a bishop?"

"Yis, sorr," said Pat.

"And you a bricklayer's laborer! The good things of life are far from being equally divided, aren't they?"

"No, sorr," replied Pat, as he swung a loaded hod to his shoulder, "my poor brother couldn't lift this 'ere to save his loife!"

Revenge!

AN official of the telephone company was rudely aroused from his first sleep by the persistent ringing of the telephone.

After stumbling over several pieces of furniture he reached the instrument and lifted the receiver.

"Hallo!" he growled.

"Are you Mr. Bell of the telephone company?" inquired a pleasant voice.

"I am!" snapped the other. "What can I do for you?"

"Tell me," replied the pleasant voice, "how you like getting out of bed at two in the morning to answer a wrong number!"

Well Worth It

YOUNG Mrs. Mavis was getting ready for a West End dance, and her husband said to her rather ruefully, as he slipped on his evening coat:

"By Jove, Joan, you certainly look ravishing in that new coat and dress!"

His wife looked at her reflection in a long mirror. She was very pleased.

"I bet it'll cost me a pretty penny, though," murmured the man.

"My dear," said his wife, as she stopped powdering her nose for a moment to give him a searching smile, "what do I care for money when it's a question of pleasing you?"

Flattering

BERTIE was an exuberant and youthful bachelor. He had an unfortunate little habit of "putting his foot in it" wherever he went and whatever he said.

A friend of his had asked him to call one evening and pay his respects to a new member of the family—a baby boy.

When Bertie arrived the proud mother held up the bundle for inspection and asked gaily:

"Tell us quite frankly, whom do you think he's like?"

After a brief examination of the baby the bachelor replied with his usual cheeriness:

"Well, of course, he's not very intelligent looking yet, but he's wonderfully like you both."—London Answers.

Ungrateful!

TWO Scottish gentlemen were paying their first visit to a certain race course. They watched two of the races run out without having anything on, but just before the start of the third event on the card one of the two sportsmen turned to the other and said:

"Would ye no like tae back a winner?"

"Ay," returned the other, and handed over a pound note.

His friend went away to put the money on, and presently returned, out of breath and excited. Extracting 11 pound notes from his pocket, he picked out one and handed it across to his companion with a flourish.

"But I gi'e ye a pound!" protested the recipient.

"Mon," exclaimed his friend bitterly, "d'ye no realize that if it hadna been for me ye'd have lost your pound?"—London Answers.

New York Day by Day
by
O.O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—New York is reputed to have the most extravagant men and women in the world. Profligacy reaches highest peak chiefly among the newly rich. Exclusive hosiery shops have women patrons who buy silk stockings to be worn once and thrown aside.

A gentleman who cleaned up in General Motors in the market frequently orders a smart dinner at several restaurants and permits guests to select the one at which they choose to dine when they arrive. Other dinners are paid for but not eaten.

A theatrical manager who once managed a strong man has six imported cars he never drives. Many florists have standing orders to supply flowers every day in the year at homes whose occupants are only in town several months in the year. The custom of having a chauffeur in reserve is common.

He is on the regular payroll but sits at the wheel on few occasions when a regular chauffeur is unable to work. Season boxes at the opera are purchased at astounding figures and frequently not occupied by purchasers more than once or twice a year. They want the publicity.

Many ladies buy so many frocks that some can only be worn once or twice and some not at all. Millinery is bought in a like manner. In reducing the allowance of a 20-year-old son, who married against his wishes, to $5,000 a year, a millionaire recently admitted the usual allowance was $25,000 annually.

At the sell-out shows nightly a block of seats will often be unoccupied as result of the host or hostess ordering them through an agency and then deciding to take the guests elsewhere. And there is one instance of the entire first five rows being purchased at a musical revue but the guests became so beautifully blotto they could not attend.

This waste, of course, is confined almost entirely to the "come easy, go easy" natives, who make it quickly. Very few of the richest, however, can stand the pace for long and the end is summed up in a fleeting few lines in news of the bankruptcy courts.

Broadway has illuminating examples of the inevitable fate of the wastrel. There are several doormen, waiters and such once tagged as "good fellows when they had it," and somehow they usually want to remain, even though obscurely, in the glare that once beckoned. Formerly opulent, they are now gleaners along the way that is white.

* * *

One of the picturesque Broadway spenders of about 10 years ago was a young man who made his fortune as a junk dealer. When the war came along he trebled his wealth and plunged deeper into dissipation. He finished up in a wheel chair—a wreck physically and financially—selling lead pencils and around his neck was a placard: "From junk to junk."

* * *

And in the memoirs of one of those millionaire kids who flash intermittently across the Dazzling Dale was this line: "I began on imported caviar at Rector's and wound up on home-made hash at Beefsteak Joe's."

* * *

A soundproof apartment house for bachelors has a line in its advertising matter that offers the ultimate in latitude. It reads: "Our only restriction is to be as quiet as possible of nights passing through hallways." And this is likely a mere consideration for the night watchmen.

* * *

There used to be a foolish rule in hotels that one could not permit mixed guests in a single room—but with an adjoining parlor the restriction was removed. Smart and exclusive hotels select guests carefully and if they have a single room it is their privilege to receive whom they please under natural assumption that all patrons are ladies and gentlemen. That is as it should be. The idea of not permitting a mother, for instance, to visit her collegiate son in his hotel room—and this has happened—is rank impertinence.

Hotels can often make more silly rules than professional lawmakers.

Modern Christianity

By DR. FRANK CRANE

President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, declared the other day in Boston that the church "must interpret the spirit of Christianity and it must translate its teachings into action in order to bring about acceptance of its principles and its philosophy."

To be sure. But the preacher or other man who attempts to put the principles of Jesus into practical operation is sure headed for trouble.

People may question whether or not Jesus was the Son of God or the Savior of the world or born of a virgin, but without question he represented a view of life absolutely unique.

In all quarrels between labor and capital, in most lawsuits and in difficulties between nations, some party always insists that people go back to the principles of Jesus. It is universally recognized that if everybody practiced those truths we would not have much more trouble.

It took a long while for the world to find out that dueling was not a satisfactory way to defend one's honor. It is much better to relegate such things to a higher tribunal than to settle them one's self.

It took a great war in the United States to pound into us that human slavery was wrong and didn't pay.

This lumbering old world is a long while in getting up to anything like the adoption of the principles of Jesus.

We are yet a long way from doing away with war, and national egotism and touchiness are looked on as virtues and called patriotism.

When Tolstoy was told that those who practiced the teachings of Christ had a hard time in this world, he replied, "How about other people? Do those people who do not practice the principles of Christ have an especially easy time?"

What the world needs is more and more of the people who are bold enough to put the truths of Christ into practical operation and brave enough to commend themselves and their careers to those truths.

Christ was more than the Savior of the world or a figure on a crucifix; he was a philosopher and really taught the world the best method for people to get along together. We are a long way from finding this out.

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS

Friends

THERE are friends for the whole of the journey as long as a man will smile, there are friends who will stay at his side all day if he travel no toilsome mile. There are friends who are gay as sunbeams and their laughter is free and loud, they are near always through the carefree days, in the ranks of the heedless crowd. Such friends are the thoughtless many who have little of love to share; but what of the few who were staunch and true when you drank of the cup, despair? Oh, cynics may mock at friendship as they point to the thoughtless throng; but one friend who was true met the need you knew, so faith brightens your whole life long.

THE LIFE OF THOMAS A. EDISON

(Authorized and Endorsed by Mr. Edison)

Text by Arthur J. Palmer
Drawings by Frank Kuchenmeister

FRANK M'GOWAN, a stocky Irishman of great courage and determination, spent 15 months exploring the jungles of South America in the search for better material for Edison's lamp filaments. In spite of terrible hardships, fevers, treacherous Indians and insect pests, McGowan faithfully fulfilled his mission.

WHEN James Ricalton, a school principal of Maplewood, N. J., was about to start out on a 'round-the-world trip in search of filament material, Edison sent him to his home for a sample of bamboo to be matched. Edison's Irish servant handed the bamboo to Ricalton, remarking "And what's he going to invent out o' that?"

RICALTON set out on Washington's birthday from Maplewood. His school children made a line of brass-headed tacks across the station platform. He stepped over this line going eastward. Exactly one year later, to the second, "Little Maude," one of his pupils, led him across the line from the west, completing his trip.

FEW things escape Edison's keen observation. In the days when he was searching for better filament material, he noticed an ordinary palm-leaf fan on a table. Upon examination he found that the binding rim was a strip of bamboo. He cut it off, had it carbonized and found it satisfactory. (Continued tomorrow.)
